Living Cost Drop Almost Wipes Out 1948 Rise

Decline Last Month —1.1 Per Cent—Sets Record for Annals Of Labor Statistics

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The decline in the cost of living set two new records in the month ending February 15 when it dropped 1.1 per cent in 30 days, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported yesterday.

1. It was the biggest monthly drop since the BLS monthly index was started in 1940—nine years ago.

2. It was the fifth month in a row the BLS has reported lower living costs—the longest consecutive decline in the last 10 years.

The drop has virtually wiped out the total increase of 1948—an increase that aroused the greatest fear of inflation in years. Living costs are now only nine-tenths of 1 per cent higher than a year ago, and slightly below the level of last April.

Food Decline Major Factor

The index in the month dropped from 170.1 to 169 per cent of the 1935-39 average. It is 3.2 per cent below last September 15.

"Chiefly responsible" for the decrease was a drop of 2.5 per cent in food. This was much more than the usual seasonal decline, BLS reported, and was the seventh consecutive month food had gone down.

Food was 2.5 per cent below a year ago; and 8 per cent below the peak prices of last July. It was 37 per cent above the June, 1946 level—the last month of OPA.

"Some foods, including eggs, fats and oils, and dairy products reached the lowest levels in a year and a half or more," BLS said.

Washington Next to Lowest

Accompanying the Nation-wide survey was a detailed report of 20 cities, including Washington.

This showed that the retail cost of all items bought by moderate-income families in Washington last month was the second lowest in the

Expense of Feeding Family Decreases

The cost to feed an "average" family of three for one year was $660 at retail prices prevailing in January, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported yesterday. This is $3 a year less than a month earlier. Last July the food costs were at a rate of $708 a year, BAE said. In 1940 they were only $317.

In January the farmer was getting 51 cents out of every dollar spent at retail for food.

D. C. Golf Talks Hit Snag Again Over Racial Issue

Battle for control of the public golf courses between the Interior Department and D. C. Board of Recreation apparently was developing into an almost hopeless impasse yesterday over contradictory racial policies.

The groups met yesterday and the board's proposal to operate the courses on a nonsegregated basis, if given control, brought a retort from Interior that the matter couldn't be discussed until the board abolished segregation for all its activities.

Admittedly, the action of the Recreation Board referred to golf courses only. There appeared little chance that the board will alter the segregated policy that applies to most of its facilities. (See details on Page B 5).

Bulganin Relieved

New Shift Puts Vasilevsky In Top Russian Military Post

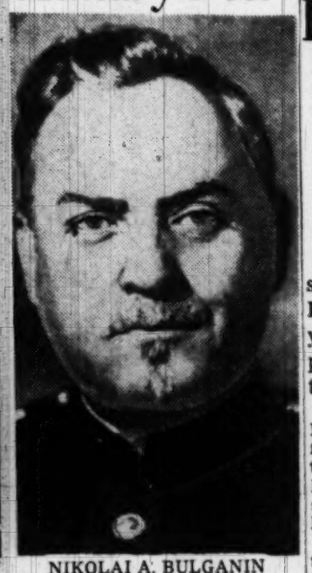
In



NIKOLAI A. BULGANIN
Out

London, March 24 (AP).—The Soviet Union announced tonight that Marshal Alexander M. Vasilevsky, 49, has succeeded Marshal Nikolai A. Bulganin as Minister of the Armed Forces—the highest military post in Russia.

This was the first big change in Soviet military leadership since Prime Minister Stalin stepped down as Minister of the Armed Forces in 1947 and appointed Bulganin to succeed him. Stalin ran the armed forces during the war.

The new shift followed top level changes in the Soviet political hierarchy in the last few weeks. The most important was the release of V. M. Molotov as Foreign Minister to be succeeded by Andrei Y. Vishinsky. Molotov remained as First Deputy Prime Minister—right at Stalin's side.

Western observers in Moscow viewed these changes as measures to strengthen the highest ranks of Soviet policymakers.

Bulganin is also a vice chairman of the council of ministers of the Soviet Union—a Deputy Prime Minister. A man known for his ability as a skilled negotiator and administrator, Bulganin will presumably keep his deputy premiership.

Into the post of Minister of the Armed Forces comes a relatively young man who has carved out a distinguished career in Soviet military annals. Valislevsky was Deputy Minister under Bulganin and therefore is closely associated with the workings of the office.

Vasilevsky had been relieved of his duties as chief of staff of the general staff of the Soviet army last November but retained his job as Deputy Minister of the Armed Forces. The Russians said they wanted to relieve Vasilevsky of an excessive burden of work.

Bulganin's last declaration to bring him world-wide notice was his order marking the thirty-first anniversary of the Red Army last month.

He said Soviet fighting men must maintain a constant battle of preparedness at a high level because of the "policy of aggression" pursued by the United States.

"The ruling circles of the United States which seek to establish their world domination by force pursue a policy of aggression and of unleashing a new war," said the order over his name.

The Moscow broadcast announcing the promotion of Vasilevsky said:

"The Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR has relieved Marshal N. A. Bulganin, a vice chairman of the council of ministers of the USSR, of his duties as Minister of the Armed Forces of the USSR.

"The Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR has appointed

Secret Soviet Spy Orders in U. S. Revealed

A-Bomb Plants No. 1 Target, House Probers Declare in Pamphlet

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The House Un-American Activities Committee revealed yesterday it had uncovered "recent secret orders" to Soviet spies in this country for information on a score of military subjects.

It then listed a number of subjects, including Air Force organization and numbers and performance of aircraft, radar and robot airplanes, ground troop numbers and organization, V-1 and V-2 production, and Navy organization and bases.

But foremost among targets of Russian spies, the committee said, was information on "production secrets of the atom bomb."

The committee's charges were contained in a pamphlet called "Spotlight on Spies" and based in part on testimony of former Soviet agents last year. Some of this testimony was given at open hearings and some in closed session.

The United States, the committee declared, is "the number one target of the Soviet spy system." This is so, it explained, because United States technical and scientific knowledge is the most advanced in the world and "Russia wants the industrial capacity of the United States."

The committee then quoted "a former Soviet spy" as saying that "this country is the easiest in the world for spies to work in and obtain secret information." This is true, the committee explained:

1. "Because of the number of Soviet sympathizers whose jobs put them in a position to get secret information.

2. "Because of the naive attitude

New District Sales Tax Bill Reported Out

House Committee's Minority Protests At 'Steamroller'; Vote Is 15 to 5

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A new 2 per cent District sales tax bill rode out of the House District Committee yesterday followed by angry protests against "steamroller" tactics.

The vote for the bill was 15 to 5. Minority members promised a new fight on the House floor Monday to defeat the sales tax again. The House voted 176 to 166 against a slightly different 2 per cent sales levy last week.

The committee also voted 13 to 6 to send to the floor the $330 pay raise bill for police, firemen and teachers, retroactive to last July when the Federal classified employes got the same raise.

Contingent on Revenue

Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) said he will hold up pay bill action until the revenue measure goes through both Houses. The pay bill specifies that increases are not to be paid until money is available.

He wants two hours of debate on the 18-million-dollar revenue measure, which also includes: (1) a 50 per cent increase in liquor license fees; (2) a boost of 15 cents in the present property tax rate of $2 per $100 (3) reduction from $10,000 to $5000 in the unincorporated business income tax exemption, and (4) an increase in the basic District personal income tax exemption from $1000 to $4000 on income received after Dec. 31, 1949.

McMillan said he had agreed to give one hour to the minority.

Want to Secure Money First

Members who voted against the pay bill said they were not against the measure, but felt money should be secured first. Anti-sales tax members said they all voted to report the pay bill.

Representative Walter K. Granger (D., Utah), a member of the anti-sales tax group, said after the closed meeting that sales tax backers "ran roughshod" over their opponents, and added "we're going to give them a fight on the floor."

He said he thought the bill would be defeated.

Sales tax sponsors count on increased help from House leaders to pass the revised measure.

Minority Preparing Report

The anti-sales tax group is preparing a minority report. They wanted to raise more revenue mainly by extending the income tax here to persons who do not pay it now, and by increasing the property tax rate from $2 to $2.25.

Backing the income tax plan were Granger, and Representatives Klein (D., N. Y.), Kennedy (D., Mass.), Buchanan (D., Pa.), Morrison (D., La.), and Miller (D., Calif.).

The fiscal affairs subcommittee headed by Representative Howard

Trumans Fete Churchills at Blair House

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Winston Churchill, the "greatest Englishman of his times," came to Washington yesterday for his fifth visit since Pearl Harbor.

He and Mrs. Churchill were guests of honor at a dinner for 18 given last night by President Truman and Mrs. Truman at Blair House. For the occasion the First Lady had arranged for the serving of roast beef and Yorkshire pudding. Two toasts were offered. Mr. Truman proposed one to "His Majesty, the King," and Mr. Churchill proposed one to "the President of the United States." The dinner table conversation was of a "general" character.

Crowds were gathered outside of Blair House as the Churchills went in and again as they left at 10:37 p. m.

"Hi, ya, Winnie," a bystander yelled as Mr. Churchill emerged last night.

The distinguished visitor swerved, walked over toward the crowd and gallantly doffed his hat. Then he and Mrs. Churchill started for the British Embassy.

The wartime Prime Minister of Britain, now a lively 74, was pink-cheeked and beaming as he stepped from a private railroad car named the Richelieu in the afternoon. A plume of smoke, drifting out of the vestibule from his cigar, told the

Stamp System Urged for New Social Security

Suggested to Help Make Possible Vast Coverage Extension

By The Associated Press

A new "stamp-book" taxpaying system was suggested yesterday by the Administration to help make possible a vast expansion of social security.

The stamp system is designed principally for farm workers and household help who would be among the 20 million new workers blanketed under old-age insurance if Congress approves the expansion.

Arthur J. Altmeyer, Social Security Commissioner, projected the tax plan as he laid before the House Ways and Means Committee the details of President Truman's program to:

(1) Increase the coverage of old-age and survivors' insurance from 30 million to 50 million workers, (2) boost the insurance benefits about double; 3, create a new insurance program for disabled workers, and (4) reduce the "pension age" for women from 65 to 60.

Stiff resistance already has formed against Mr. Truman's proposal to increase the security tax take from the present $1,800,000,000 a year to about five billion dollars.

Battle Ended, Rankin Says; Others Plan New Effort

Dramatic 1-Vote Action Comes on Recapitulation as 2 Members Switch

(Roll call on Page 14)

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

After three days of bedlam, the House yesterday dropped the mauled veterans' pension bill right back in the lap of the House Veterans Committee by the barest of voting margins.

The Rankin bill was buried, 208 to 207, in a dramatic recapitulation of the vote. Only a few minutes before, the shuttlecock measure appeared to have been resurrected, 209 to 208.

Right back where he started with the multi-billion-dollar bill, Mississippi's Rankin furiously stalked off the floor and told newsmen:

"This ends the battle for veterans' pensions legislation at this session of Congress."

Veterans Don't Agree

But a little group of World War II veterans, who led the fight to first rewrite and then sidetrack the Rankin bill, did not agree with him.

They predicted "reasonable veterans' pension legislation, within the ability of our economy to finance," will be passed by the Eighty-first Congress.

The photo-finish of the Rankin bill came after a series of parliamentary maneuvers following the identical merry-go-round pattern of Tuesday's unsuccessful attempt to recommit the bill.

Representative Teague (D., Tex.), a wounded World War II veteran, offered a privileged motion to strike out the enacting clause of the costly measure.

Teague's motion, technically killing the bill but actually jockeying it into position for the roll-call move to recommit, first lost, 159 to 168, on a standing vote.

Teague demanded tellers, and this time his motion carried, 171 to 168.

Under the rules, the House, sitting as a "committee" to consider the bill, automatically went back into the whole House, where record votes are permitted.

Teague then moved to recommit the bill "for further study."

Rankin strenuously objected that the first rollcall vote should come on the motion to strike out the enacting clause—a motion he

A woman photographer hurled a bowl of the Senate dining room's famous bean soup smack into the face of Columnist Tris Coffin at lunch time yesterday.

The bean soup—the large, 20-cent economy bowl, not the 15-cent cup—was hurled by Marion Carpenter of 200 Massachusetts ave. nw. It was her method of registering her objection to an item by Coffin in his column yesterday stating that she "teased and smiled" Senator McKellar (D., Tenn.) into the pose for a photograph the Senator liked well enough to order in large sizes.

About 1:30 p. m. the 29-year-old Miss Carpenter walked into the dining room, sat down next to Coffin at the press table and ordered the bean soup. With no warning she picked up the bowl and, in her own words, "hung it on his head."

Second Judgeship Asked

Hope Abandoned for Return To Bench of Judge Bentley

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Juvenile Court Judge Fay Bentley, now a voluntary patient at St. Elizabeths Hospital, is "beyond hope of recovery sufficient to permit her to return to the bench," a District Bar Association committee has been informed.

Bentley

Acting on this information, the association's committee on relations with Juvenile Court has had introduced in Congress a bill to create an additional Juvenile Court judgeship, The Washington Post was told yesterday.

Earl H. Davis, chairman of a subgroup which prepared the bill, sent it with a letter to Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.), Senate District Committee chairman, and Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.), chairman of the District subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee.

In his letter, Davis said "it is earnestly felt that this legislation is sorely needed at this time to prevent any further impairment of the work" of both the Municipal and Juvenile Courts.

At present Judge Bentley's post is being temporarily filled by Judge Nadine Gallagher of Municipal Court. But, the bar group pointed out, this only serves to increase the burden on other Municipal Court judges and crowd the docket.

Judge Bentley's present term runs until August 12, 1952. Under the Juvenile Court act, there is no provision for her retirement because of disability. The judge left the bench last December for a serious operation necessitated by a traffic injury suffered in 1946. She was admitted voluntarily to St. Elizabeths after the operation.

The bar association's juvenile court committee on February 9 heard a report on Judge Bentley's health. The information, Davis said, came throught court channels and was accepted by the group as conclusive evidence that something

'Cliff Dwelling' No Deterrent

D. C. Called Mecca for Those Headed for Mental Crackup

Based on population, the rate of mentally sick persons committed to Washington's St. Elizabeths Hospital is equalled only by New York and Massachusetts, Congress was told yesterday.

Dr. Winfred Overholser, St. Elizabeths superintendent, made the statement to a Senate Appropriations subcommittee. He was urging restoration of $70,000 in operating funds for the hospital sliced by the House recently.

The eminent psychiatrist attributed the high rate of mental sickness here to three chief factors:

(1) The army of government workers who converged on the city in the war years,

(2) The "wanderers on verge of mental breakdown" who come to Washington to see a senator or congressman or Federal agencies on long-standing personal problems and

(3) Washington's apartment-type living, "or cliff dwelling," in which "you don't have to show much peculiarity to have it come to light," Overholser said smiling.

He pointed out that 5040 of the institution's present population of 6700 patients are classified as District residents.

But Overholser quickly emphasized that many of the District patients were not Washington's own. "We have accumulated many citizens who have been wandering around the country for years, and just seem to wind up here before breaking down," he said.

Overholser also told the committee that the District was "in the red" to St. Elizabeths for patients chargeable to the city to the tune of $70,000.

He said the District owes the hospital $40,000 in bills incurred during the 1948 fiscal year and $30,000 for the preceding year. "I trust and hope we will be repaid," he said.

Overholser expressed fear that unless the House cuts are restored the per diem rate for patient care, as yet not set for the coming year, might be cut and hence pyramid into between a $350,000 to $400,000 deficit to the hospital.

The hospital had asked Congress for $1,820,000 in Federal appropriations. The balance of the institution's $10,943,041 budget will come almost entirely from District funds.

West German State Prospects Reduced

Takes a Licking

Split Berlin Is Caught in Stamp War

Berlin, March 24 (AP).—Divided Berlin today was caught in an East-West postage stamp war which, in effect, made every man his own letter carrier.

Postoffices in Berlin's three western sectors were refusing to accept mail which did not bear stamps of western issue.

Postoffices in Berlin's Russian sector continued rejecting mail which did not bear eastern issue stamps.

Thus a western Berliner who wants to mail a letter to eastern Berlin or a city in the Soviet occupation zone now has to cross into the Russian sector, buy an eastern stemp and deposit his letter there.

Today the city streetcar syslem began operating with two sets of conductors—one for the Russian sector and one for the western sectors.

When a streetcar arrives from the west at the borders of the Russian sector, the conductor gets off because he has only west-mark fares and the Russians have outlawed the west-mark. He yields his place to a Russian sector conductor, then mounts the next car coming out of the Soviet sector headed west.

The motormen are still able to make round trips.

Frankfurt, Germany, March 24 (AP).—The prospects for creation of a west German state appeared today to be no better than 50-50.

Communists opposing the plan for a federalized western Germany have found some strange allies in western Germany's Socialist Party, a new national movement for a united Germany, and the French military government.

Their political motives vary. All have worked independently. But the influences against the west German state have grown enormously in the past few weeks.

If the present German constituent assembly at Bonn fails to adopt a constitution, American and British policy in Germany must undergo a complete change.

A Communist-led people's council approved a German constitution at a meeting in Berlin last Saturday.

The Bonn assembly presented the three western military governors a draft constitution early this month. The military governors recommended several changes intended to decentralize the projected federal government and give the states more power.

The German Socialists, who have 27 of the 65 votes in the assembly, want a strong central government with state planning and say they can make no further concessions. The assembly cannot vote a constitution without the Socialists, because a two-thirds vote is needed for ratification.

Observers here agree the French will oppose any concession on the recommendations of the military governors, French Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, U. S. Gen. Lucius D. Clay and British Gen. Sir Brian Robertson.

A third and less potent factor threatening the west German state has popped up in the United Germany movement personified by Dr. Rudolph Nadolny, former German Ambassador to Moscow.

The ministers-president of the 11 western German states, however stood firm today for a west German government. A communique said:

Points of difference between the assembly and the military governors "do not appear to be such as to prevent a quick and satisfactory agreement."

Soong Faces $2 Billion Accounting

Nanking, March 24 (U.P.). — The Control Yuan decided today to ask former Premier T. V. Soong for an accounting of two billion dollars (United States) in gold and silver foreign exchange which the government body said "disappeared" during his one-year tenure as Premier.

The Control Yuan has powers of audit and impeachment. The Yuan said China had the two billion dollars on hand at end of the war and that it was "imperative" that Soong be called back to Nanking to testify.

The Yuan said the disposal of proceeds from the sale of American relief supplies and surplus army property was "not clarified."

Soong, brother of Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, now lives in Hong Kong.

Control Yuan member Hu Wen-hui moved a resolution to censure former Finance Minister Hsu Kan for complicity in former Premier Sun Fo's alleged misappropriation of 110 million dollars ($73,000 United States at the black market rate) from public funds. Leaders of the Kuomintang, government party, were reported today to be drafting a demand that the government "reconsider" its pro-American policy and become more friendly with Russia.

This completed a series of five espionage trials by the commission. It convicted 17 persons in all, and acquitted one.

Educator Says North Koreans Slew His Wife

Seoul, March 24 (NYHT).—Dr. Horace H. Underwood, president emeritus of Chosen Christian University, said today he believed his wife "was killed on orders from someone up North, to give the impression of anti-Americanism in Korea." Mrs. Underwood was shot to death by two masked Koreans in her home here on March 17.

Dr. Underwood thus took issue with the statements by President Syngman Rhee and other high officials that the killing probably was incidental to an attempted assassination of Miss Marion Mo (Mrs. Mo Yun Suk), an anti-Communist Y.W.C.A leader, who was attending a tea party in the Underwood home.

Dr. Underwood said he was convinced his wife's death represented only another casualty in the world-wide battle between communism and Christianity.

"It was a political assassination," he said, "and from the point of view of the Communists the order for it was intelligently given. Look all around the world and you will see that the chief emotional force at grips with communism comes from the church. It is perfectly natural that a blow here should fall on a leader in American missionary work."

Virus Indicated Cause of Cancer, British Report

London, March 24 (AP). — The British Medical Journal said today new experiments indicating definitely that a virus is the cause of cancer may lead to "the biggest advance in cancer reesarch for many years."

Dr. W. E. Gye, director of the Imperial Cancer Research Fund, and three colleagues wrote how they transmitted tumors in mice.

Dr. Gye reported: "The experimental evidence points to the conclusion that cancer has a continuing cause and that this, in mammals as in birds, is a virus."

Russians Take Finns to Task on Wolf Hunt

By Eddy Gilmore

Moscow, March 24 (AP).—Soviet newspapers described today an elaborate aerial wolf hunt in northern Finland and suggested the project was a cover-up for a more important activity.

The Finnish Popular Democratic newspaper Vapaa Sana was quoted as saying certain American and British circles were tremendously interested in the hunt.

According to Soviet accounts, the hunt netted only four wolves. The government newspaper Izvestia said such small results from such a highly organized expedition "support the theory the hunt had more important purposes." Two Finnish army generals named Oinonen took part in the hunt, Izvestia said.

The hunt was said to have been conducted in Finnish Lapland, which borders on the Soviet Union. The Soviet news agency Tass said in a dispatch from Helsinki:

"Judging from the press, the notorious 'wolf hunt' in Lapland with the use of radio, planes and air photos, in which a large number of people took part, yielded very modest results."

Acheson to Confer With Pact Signers

Secretary of State Acheson plans to confer April 2 with the foreign ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty nations, in the first top-level meeting launching the defense alliance.

At that mteting, two days before the signing of the pact here, the foreign ministers are expected to reach formal agreement on the published treaty draft, and discuss plans for putting the alliance into effect as soon as it is ratified by the signatory nations.

The treaty is scheduled to be signed in ceremonies beginning at 3 p. m. April 4 in the Departmental Auditorium, as forecast yesterday in The Washington Post.

Truman To Attend

President Truman, at his press conference yesterday, confirmed that he will attend the signing ceremonies. Secretary Acheson will sign the treaty for the United States.

The negotiators of the alliance are the United States, Canada, Great Britain, France, Norway, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg. Denmark, Italy and Portugal have also been invited to join, and all 12 nations are likely to participate in the signing.

To support the pact, military aid legislation is now being drafted and will be sent to Congress about the same time that the treaty is sent to the Senate for ratification.

Officials of the National Resources Board are reported to have advised the State Department that a two-billion-dollar military aid program can be carried out without endangering the national economy.

Space Limited

Of that amount, it is expected that about $1,500,000,000 in arms aid will be sought for pact members, with the balance destined for such countries as Greece, Turkey and Iran.

Because of limited seating facilities at the Departmental Auditorium—situated on Constitution ave. east of 14th st.—the treaty-signing ceremony will not be open to the public.

Seats will be limited to 1300 or 1500 persons, depending on the amount of floor space which will be required for other purposes.

The auditorium, which has a 60-foot ceiling, a balcony and a moderate-sized stage, was built in 1934, at the same time as the Labor Department and Interstate Commerce Department Buildings, which adjoin it. It was the scene of the pre-World War II draft number drawings, and has provided space for numerous Government conferences.

Western Camp Cracks Door For Tito Entry, If He Chooses

By R. H. Shackford

London, March 24 (U.P.) — The United States and Britain have evolved a new policy toward Yugoslavia that eventually would welcome Marshal Tito into the western camp if and when Tito chooses to make the leap, it was learned today.

No overtures will be made by the West to Tito. The initiative must come from him. And if Tito chooses to change, he must prove that he has severed his connections with Moscow.

The new United States policy was promoted by the new Secretary of State, Dean Acheson. Initially it means that Yugoslavia can resume trade with the United States, if and when she chooses. It is understood any trade orders from Tito would get sympathetic consideration now, whereas in the past they have been given a cold shoulder.

The new British policy toward Yugoslavia, which is linked closely with that of the United States, was broadly hinted in the House of Commons last night by Minister of State Hector McNeil.

"The position of Tito is, of course, of great importance to us," McNeil said. "We will look carefully at each nuance in this situation. But we should not, obviously, at any time place additional embarrassment in the way of the Yugoslav government in their present situation."

Another British official expanded today on this.

"Tito has shown himself to be tough," the official said. "He has stood up to the Kremlin for a year. We think, barring accidents, he will continue to stand up to the Kremlin. At the moment, our money is on Tito. But we must be careful not to play into the Kremlin's hands."

It was learned the basic plan toward Tito has been approved by the United States National Security Council.

The objective is to be ready to do anything possible in the coming months that will help to maintain Tito's independence of the Kremlin.

Yugoslavs Consult U. S. Firm on Steel Expansion

Belgrade, March 24 (NYHT). The Yugoslav government is believed to have approached the firm of H. A. Brassert & Co., consulting engineers, of New York, one of the world's largest steel consultants, on a project of great importance to the economic succes of Premier Tito's regime.

(Herman A. Brassert, president of the company, tonight confirmed that two representatives of his firm had visited Belgrade to discuss expansion of the Yugoslav iron and steel industry.)

The discussion is believed to have been intended to go far beyond the contract for technical assistance to the Yugoslav iron and steel industry signed with a British concern, McKenzie Engineering Company, Ltd., of London, in December. The deal with the McKenzie firm, which involves mainly advice in the preparation of plants, was estimated at about 15 million dollars.

Greece Asks Aid Against Reds

ATHENS, Greece, March 24 (U.P.) Premier Themistocles Sophoulis appealed today for American or other Allied troops to help guard Greece's Communist-infested northern frontiers.

The Greek government would be "most grateful" for such military aid, Sophoulis said.

He said his country's fight against Communist guerillas was "of an international character" and proposed that foreign troops be sent here either under the United Nations charter or through the Atlantic Pact.

Dean Being Considered For Atomic Unit Post

Gordon Dean of California is among several people under consideration for appointment to the Atomic Energy Commission.

President Truman aeknowledged this yesterday at his news conference in response to questions.

There are indications that action may be taken soon to fill the vacancy on the commission caused by the resignation of W. W. Waymack.

Senator McMahon (D., Conn.) was a White House caller during the day. He said he and Mr. Truman talked about the vacancy.

Danish House Passes Pact

Copenhagen, Denmark, March 24 (AP).—The lower house of the Danish parliament today approved the nation's entry into the North Atlantic alliance by a 5-to-1 margin. The action was referred to the upper house, where similar approval is regarded as certain.

By its vote of 119 to 23 the lower house also authorized the government to ratify the pact, after signature, without further reference to parliament. One member abstained and seven were not present.

The nine Communist deputies made an unsuccessful attempt to prevent the government from granting other nations bases on Danish territory, including Greenland. it was voted down, 129 to 9.

Portuguese Cabinet Reported Approving

Lisbon, Portugal, March 24 (U.P.) Well-informed sources said tonight that the cabinet had decided in principle to sign the North Atlantic Treaty even though Spain might cancel the Portuguese-Spanish defense agreement as the result.

However, the government is continuing discussions with Spain.

West Doesn't Threaten Or Submit, Bevin Says

Southampton, England, March 24 (U.P.).—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, embarking for the United States where he will sign the Atlantic Treaty, said today the western countries do not threaten "nor will we submit to threats."

1-Year Pregnancy Held Possible in Divorce Denial

London, March 24 (U.P.)—A divorce court judge ruled today that a wife was not necessarily guilty of misconduct just because she gave birth to a child 12 months after her husband left the country.

Charles Preston Jones, petitioning for divorce, said his wife's baby could not be his because he left England on Royal Air Force service 360 days before it was born. The average period of gestation is 280 days.

Divorce Commissioner George Blanco White refused the divorce. He said he didn't think a pregnancy of "360 days was so impossibly long as to show that misconduct had been committed."

Gans to Be Cuban Envoy

Havana, Cuba, March 24 (AP). The Senate, in secret session last night, approved the nomination of Oscar Gans to be Ambassador to Washington. He is expected to go there shortly.

Italian Vote on Pact Expected Tonight

Rome, Italy, March 24 (U.P.).—The Senate debate on the North Atlantic Pact limped through another dull session today, and the final vote was not expected until Friday night.

Forrestal in Favor Of Wider Authority

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

James Forrestal, retiring Secretary of Defense, asked Congress yesterday to bind the armed forces together in a new Department of Defense and give his successor greater power to make unification work.

Testifying before the Senate Armed Services Committee, he admitted frankly that his 18 months at the head of the National Military Establishment had changed his views as to the authority of the Secretary.

Two years ago, Forrestal—then Secretary of the Navy—opposed legislation giving the proposed defense chief substantially the authority he is now proposing. Partly as the result of his stand, Congress passed a watered down unification act.

Fears Security Risks

"I am now convinced that there are adequate checks and balances in our governmental structure to prevent misuse of the broad authority which I feel must be vested in the Secretary of Defense," Forrestal said.

"I am also convinced that a failure to endow this official with sufficient authority to control effectively the conduct of our military affairs will force upon us far greater risks."

The Defense Secretary, who will be replaced by Louis A. Johnson next week, appeared in support of a Administration bill to revamp the 18-month-old Unification Act. Johnson, it was announced yesterday, will be sworn in as Secretary of Defense at 11 a. m. Monday in the center court of the Pentagon. Chief Justice Vinson will administer the oath.

Provisions of Bill

The bill would:

1. Give the Secretary of Defense definite authority to exercise full control over the armed forces.
2. Provide the defense chief with additional top assistants and a larger staff to carry out the authority.
3. Legally establish the post of chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff — now held temporarily by General Eisenhower.
4. Take away the statutory powers of the Munitions Board and Research and Development Board and make them staff agencies responsible to the Secretary.

Tydings Praises Service

Chairman Tydings (D., Md.) of the Senate committee opened the hearing by paying high tribute to Forrestal's service. The retiring Secretary also was honored at dinner given by the Army, Navy and Air Force Secretaries Monday night.

President Truman lauded Forrestal's contributions and said he finally gave in to the latter's desire to retire for Forrestal's "own welfare." The Defense Secretary recently has been reportd near exhaustion from his grueling job.

Mr. Truman, who arrived late after attending a family dinner, said he'd got a promise from Forrestal to come back to Government service in an emergency. The President added that he hoped he'd be "as well thought of" as Forrestal when he leaves public service.

Big 4 Set Aside Tito Squabble

London, March 24 (U.P.).—The Big Four Deputy Foreign Ministers today abandoned efforts to agree at this time on Yugoslavia's claims against Austria and then immediately fell into a controversy over something else.

The deputies are trying to write an Austrian peace treaty. Today they took up a clause concerning the handling of displaced persons and refugees. The new dispute came on definition of the two groups.

This seemed to confirm fears the deputies will make little if any progress before next week, when Soviet Delegate Gorge Zarubin is expected to leave for New York to attend the United Nations General Assembly.

Country Club Head Is Found Slain

Kansas City, March 24 (AP).—A prominent country club manager was shot to death today in his parked car not far from the downtown district.

Wolf C. Rimann, about 45, and long identified with Midwest golfing, was killed instantly.

Police issued a pickup order for three men.

No motive was advanced for the slaying. A friend of Rimann's, Marty Graham, told police Rimann had drawn between $20,000 and $25,000 from a bank earlier in the day.

Police said only $183 was found on Rimann's body.

2 Aides Ousted By Hungary People's Heroes

Vienna, Austria, March 24 (AP).—Diplomatic sources said today the real reason Hungary's Communist government expelled two assistant United States military attaches is that they were becoming heroes to the people.

The two are Lieut. Col. Peter J. Kopcsak of Greenberg, Pa., and Lieut. Col. John P. Merrill of Bethesda, Md. They arrived here last night to await orders from Washington. Hungary had accused them of spying and abuse of diplomatic privileges. The two said the expulsion was based on "completely fabricated and trumped-up charges."

The diplomatic informants said Kopcsak had shown scorn for the Communist-controlled Hungarian state police many times during two and a half years of service. Merrill, who arrived in Budapest only last January, was rapidly acquiring the same sort of reputation.

Kopcsak received hundreds of fan letters and telephone calls from Hungarians after a clash with the police at Szeged, near the Yugoslav border. These praised him for "having the nerve to do what we cannot do."

Expulsion of Kopcsak and Merrill brings to five the number of American diplomats forced out of Hungary reecntly.

Warsaw, Poland, March 24 (U.P.).—United States Press Attache Chester Opal of Chicago, Ill., said today he planned to leave Poland within 10 days at the "request" of the Polish government.

British May Retaliate For Diplomat Expulsion

London, March 24 (U.P.).—The British government will probably file a strong protest with Czechoslovakia on the expulsion of a British official in Prague and may expel a member of the Czech embassy staff in London in retaliation, authoritative quarters said today.

A foreign office spokesman said the Czech government accusations against Philip Wildash, military permit officer, were "completely unfounded."

Sponsors of Parley Allegedly Coerced

New York, March 24 (NYHT).—Charges of "an intellectual reign of terror instigated by certain New York literary and music critics" were made tonight by the editors of "partisan review," monthly literary magazine. The editors said these critics have put pressure on writers and musicians to lend their name in support of the Cultural and Scientific Conference for World peace which will open here Friday.

Their statement was issued through Americans for Intellectual Freedom, which will hold a counter rally Saturday afternoon. The statement did not name the critics under attack nor the writers and musicians supposed to have been subjected to coercion.

Plans for picketing and a demonstration against the conference took definite shape today. Thousands are expected to jam the street outside the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel by the time the conference dinner, scheduled for 7 p. m., gets under way.

the department as a springboard for Communist propaganda.

Optimistic American overtures to a free exchange of scientific and cultural information with Russia—spurred by the combat camaraderie of World War II—began hopefully as early as 1943, said the department, but soon met mounting resistance.

By the summer of 1947, the report states, rejection of efforts to exchange persons, literature, and technical information with Russia became fairly positive; by 1948, they met "open" refusal, through suspicion of American motives.

Gives "Only Conclusion"

"The only conclusion that can be drawn from Soviet opposition to an exchange of students and professors and an expansion of publications exchange," the department said, is that:

1. "The Soviet government fears a free interchange of ideas because . . . 30 years of communism have failed to provide the patient Soviet people with a living standard anywhere approximating that enjoyed by workers in the United States . . ."

2. This same communistic era has "deprived the Soviet people of freedom of thought and action . . ."

3. If such freedom is "experienced through contact with American people or American books (it) will make them ill content with their life in the Soviet Union."

The form and presentation of the State Department report showed a strong effort to get the record straight and clear, in advance of the New York conference, to checkmate what it expects will be a full-fledged attack on American institutions and policy.

Another meeting, which American officials feel will bring an even stronger attempt to smear American policies—particularly the proposed North Atlantic treaty—is a "World Congress of Partisans of Peace," scheduled in Paris in early April.

The Paris conference is a follow-up of the "World Congress of Intellectuals for Peace," held in Wroclaw, Poland, in August, 1948, which brought violent denunciation of the United States for preparing "a barbaric war."

In connection with the New York conference, which opens Saturday, the department stated it had knowingly granted visas to "notable Communist propagandists," because "to do so is in accordance with the American view of freedom of intellectual exchange."

A basis for American understanding with Russia was created, the State Department said, through American technical aid and equipment employed during the prewar years of the first two of the Soviet Five-Year Plans, and during World War II.

These tangible items, said the report, gave the Russian people visual knowledge of the American standard of living, and as early as 1943—at the Moscow Conference of Foreign Ministers—the American Government sought to cement this understanding with an information and exchange program.

After repeated attempts through the postwar years, however, the report states:

"It soon became obvious . . . that the Soviet government did not share the United States Government's views on the importance of creating genuine instruments for bridging the gulf between the two peoples.

"Encountered Obstacles"

"In proposing concrete proposals for cultural cooperation, American officials consistently encountered obstacles placed in their path by the Soviet authorities. Whether United States efforts were aimed at establishing an exchange of students, professors and artists, or books, research findings, and films, the results were the same.

"The uncooperative attitude, the lack of interest, the interminable delay or absence of replies by the Soviet government thwarted American attempts at establishing cultural relations between the two wartime allies."

A major barrier to free information exchange, it was stated, is the Soviet secrecy act of 1947, which heavily penalizes Soviet citizens other than officials of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Ministry of Foreign Trade from having any relations with representatives of foreign nations.

Since the passage of that act, the State Department noted increased momentum in the Russian anti-American propaganda drive, charging ulterior motives in American proposals.

"Seepage" Fear Charged

Even before then, however, evasion, delay or complete disregard met most American offers, the report said, based on the view that:

"Information about the prosperity and freedom of the world outside the USSR would leak in; information about actual conditions within the Soviet Union would leak out. Seepage in either direction would weaken the Soviet government."

Giving names, dates and places, the State Department report cites unanswered offers or unsuccessful attempts to bring the Red Army Chorus and similar groups to the United States, establish a student exchange program and a scientific exchange program, bring Soviet lecturers here, exchange technicians, etc.

"Certain approved Soviet institutions," the report states, "were included in the GI bill in the hope that American veterans might study in the USSR. It was impossible, however, to make arrangements for their admittance."

Some few bright spots of cooperation, however, are noted in the report, including wartime training in American industry of Soviet engineers, technicians and scholars; a visit of American writers and scholars to the Russian Academy of Sciences in 1946; a 10-week visit here the same year by three prominent Soviet journalists.

Little Given, Report Says

In the field of publication exchange, the report states while American institutions seek to exchange as much information as possible, and freely distribute all types of literature to Russia, the Soviet attitude is "to secure as much as possible for the Soviet Union while giving as little as possible to American libraries."

Most of the Soviet "exchange," it was said, consists of newspapers, pamphlets, etc., while Russia has been able to amass "extraordinarily detailed information" on United States' plants, industry performance and products.

Not discussed in the report was the official United States publication, "America," 50,000 copies of which are distributed each month in the Soviet Union.

The publication, the only magazine of its kind permitted in Russia, features nonpolitical subjects and is sold to the Soviet government. It serves as a slim informational link with the United States, in addition to Voice of America broadcasts.

Additional Sponsors Quit Peace Conference

New York, March 24 (AP)—Additional sponsors withdrew today on the eve of the "world peace" conference as protest groups stopped up preparations for counterdemonstrations.

The newly formed Americans for Intellectual Freedom (AIF) said eight more prominent persons had resigned from the conference.

The AIF's list of those withdrawing was headed by Franklin P. Adams, newspaper columnist known as FPA.

Others were said to be Canada Lee, Negro actor; Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell of the University of Chicago; Lynn Riggs, playwright; Rabbi Mordecai M. Kaplan of the Jewish Theological Seminary; the Rev. Karl Crorowsky, minister of a Brooklyn Unitarian church; Prof. Ernest Hocking of Harvard University, and Rabbi Herbert S. Goldstein of the West Side Institutional Synagogue.

An invitation to the Russian delegation to the peace conference to inspect major American factories went out today from the National Association of Manufacturers.

Hotel Cancels Dinner For Russian Composer

Philadelphia, March 24 (AP).—The Broadwood Hotel today canceled a reservation for a dinner for Russian Composer Dmitri Shostakovich.

It was the second time in three days that a Philadelphia establishment turned thumbs down on a Shostakovich affair. Town Hall, privately owned like the hotel, rejected a proposed concert.

Both affairs had been set for next Wednesday.

Writings of Stalin Quoted at Red Trial

New York, March 24 (AP).—Writings of Josef Stalin were read to the jury at the Communist conspiracy trial today in the Government's effort to prove the party plans to use violence in seizing control of the United States.

U. S. Attorney John F. X. McGohey read several excerpts from "Foundations of Leninism," written by the Russian premier.

This publication was one of several identified by Louis Budenz, one-time high Communist official but now an arch-foe of the party. Budenz is the first Government witness.

McGohey quoted Stalin as declaring that the proletarian revolution in the United States "is impossible without the violent destruction of the machinery of the bourgeois state and its replacemen by the machinery of the proletariat state."

Another book read by the prosecutor, "Why Communism," suggested that Communist revolutionists were justified in using poison gases "to fight the bosses."

A third publication admitted into evidence, a "Manual of Organization of the Communist Party," asserted the final objective of the American Communist Party is to establish a "Soviet socialist republic in the United States."

Budenz, former member of the American party's "politburo" who renounced communism in 1945, said all these publications were given to him by Jacob Stachel, one of the 11 party leaders who are defendants in the trial.

He testified he used the books and manual constantly through his decade of a party service. His duties included editorship of the Daily Worker, New York Communist newspaper.

Called Underground Chief

The defendants are charged with conspiring to advocate the forcible overthrow of the United States Government.

The organization manual was written by J. V. Peters, alias Alexander Stevens who has been described as the head of the Communist underground in America.

Budenz said the author of "Why Communism" was the late M. J. Olgin, one-time editor of the Daily Freiheit, which the witness described as a Communist paper published here.

Sharp clashes between opposing counsel and between Judge Harold R. Medina and the defense continued to mark the trial.

At one point, Harry Sacher, defense lawyer, shouted that Government attorneys were spying on his papers. He proceeded to build a wall of books and pamphlets to shield them.

Another defense attorney objected lengthily to admission of the publications identified by Budenz, contending they were published long before the dates of the conspiracy mentioned in the indictment. These dates are 1945 to 1948.

Medina interrupted to comment:

"Well, you know, this will still be going on next Christmas and we will never get through."

"I object to that remark," said the lawyer, Abraham Isserman.

"Well, object away, object away."

"I do, your honor."

The judge got in the last words. They were:

of many Americans about the Communist danger."

Among those it described as in position to work as Soviet spies the committee listed Government employes, some of whom might be coerced by threats to families still in Russia. Others listed were officials of the Soviet Embassy, the United Nations and Russian commercial organizations, members of the Communist Party and party sympathizers. These last it declared were most dangerous.

74,000 Members Estimated

To illustrate this point the committee quoted an estimate by FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover that there are 74,000 party members in the United States and for each of these "there are 10 others ready, willing and able to do the party's work."

"This means," the committee continued, "that at a time of national crisis, the United States would have nearly 823,000 persons who are either spies, traitors, or saboteurs working against us from within."

Presented in question-and-answer form, the pamphlet summarizes the committee's findings during last year's lengthy hearings. Although it frequently refers to witnesses, describing some as 'former spies," it gives no names.

As an antidote to the situation it describes, the committee recommends that efforts be redoubled to find Soviet spies and "send them to jail or to Russia." It also recommends new and more stringent laws dealing with peacetime espionage.

Vasilevsky holds some of the highest Soviet decorations, including the Order of Victory, Hero of the Soviet Union, the Orders of Lenin and the coveted Order of Suvorov.

He was deputy commissar for defense in 1942 and top planner of the Voronezh offensive in 1942 and 1943. He headed Soviet troops which invaded Manchuria in August, 1945.

Lucas Says Senate Will Pass Aid Bill

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The Senate will adopt the 5 billion 580 million dollar Marshall Plan extension without amendments and without cuts, Senate Majority Leader Scott Lucas of Illinois confidently predicted last night.

Lucas called for final action on the bill to continue the European Recovery Program for 15 months sometime today. He said a night session might be called if necessary to meet this schedule.

His prediction of an Administration victory came after Senate Republican Policy Chairman Robert A. Taft of Ohio had urged a billion dollar cut and other Senators had opened fire on the amount of the authorization.

Vandenberg Acclaims Work

Disagreeing with his Republican colleague, Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, ranking Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said "the facts of life so plainly recommend this second year's authorization that argument is scarcely necessary to defend this action on the part of the Senate."

Vandenberg paid high tribute to both the administration of ECA and the effect of the Marshall Plan upon European recovery.

"The first test I wish to apply is a domestic one," Vandenberg declared. "Congress plainly indicated that it felt the success of the adventure would largely depend, in the first instance, upon economic efficiency and competence of an adequate administrator.

Praises Hoffman

"I believe it is well nigh universal judgment that the answer to this first question is totally affirmative. Administrator Paul Hoffman has done a masterful job under difficult circumstances. He has mobilized one of the finest teams of competent aides that ever served a public trust.

"Their impressive testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee leaves no room for doubt that the congressional purpose could not have been more faithfully pursued and implemented and that successful end results could not have been more ably sought."

The second test, Vandenberg told the Senate, is whether or not ECA has encouraged the self-confidence of western Europe nations "to resist conspiracies of disintegration engineered by Communist aggressions from within and without."

"Can there be any doubt on that score?" Vandenberg demanded.

Issues Drawn by Moscow

"Moscow drew the naked issue when it declined its chance to join the great drive for postwar rehabilitation, instructed its reluctant satellites to boycott their own best hopes for recovery and ordered unlimited sabotage to destroy the so-called Marshall Plan before it should relieve the western European helplessness which Communist conquest requires for success."

Both Vandenberg and Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) opposed Taft's suggestion that the ECA authorization could be cut by $1,150,000,000.

Taft said that $1,150,000,000 of the funds are earmarked for spending between April 3 and the start of the 1950 fiscal year of July 1. He suggested that be eliminated on the ground that enough foreign aid goods have already been bought with previous funds and are now awaiting shipment to tide western Europe over until July. Current spending authority expires April 3.

Connally Protests

Connally protested that Taft's proposal would cause a dangerous break in the "pipeline" of recovery shipments.

Connally praised the achievements of ECA in the past year. But even though progress has been great, he said, Europe has not yet achieved recovery and still needs American dollars.

He said that by June, 1952, Europe must be "independent of extraordinary American aid."

"We do not expect to continue this program beyond that time," Connally said. He added that next year's aid program will be cut "considerably below" the first year's program, which cost $5,055,000,000.

The countries of Europe, Connally told the Senate, "have resisted the corrosive but cheap and ugly doctrine of communism that destroys and corrupts, the doctrine that assails both the dignity of man and the morality of God."

Senator Kem (R., Mo.) asked if ECA funds were not helping Socialist governments, like that of Britain.

Senator Ives (R., N. Y.) sharply interjected that with ECA aid nations had been enabled to avoid a type of government far worse than socialism.

Senator Knowland (R., Calif.) voiced the fear that Britain is preparing to change her trade policy and ship war materials to Russia and her satellites.

Connally and Vandenberg both said they were assured of the good faith of Britain in keeping potential war material out of Russian hands.

Vandenberg added that it was his understanding that the State Department will receive an official memorandum from Britain that trade with Russia will not be allowed to come in conflict with the terms of the proposed North Atlantic Security Alliance.

Twenty minutes before meat is done, add peeled potatoes and scrubbed carrots.
Ten minutes before meat is done, add cabbage washed and quartered. Leave the heart or core in cabbage, because it keeps its shape and looks prettier on the platter. Serve vegetables around meat and sprinkle potatoes with chopped parsley.

President Cancels Scheduled Speeches

President Truman said yesterday that pressure of work since his return from Florida had forced him to cancel his two remaining speaking dates, both next month and both in New York.

The first address, slated for April 10, was to have been delivered in connection with laying the cornerstone of the United Nations Building. The second was to have been at a dinner honoring Dr. Chaim Weizman, President of Israel, April 23.

The U. N. ceremony later in the day was postponed until a date when Mr. Truman can attend.

Mr. Truman already had canceled a speech scheduled for April 1 at Boston in connection with the ceremonies at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology at which Winston Churchill will speak March 31.

At the same time, Mr. Truman announced he had canceled an engagement to receive an honorary degree at Boston College April 26.

Still retaining some of the tan he acquired during his two-week vacation at Key West, the President said all his time since his return had been taken up clearing his desk of an accumulation of work and interviewing members of Congress. Questioned by reporters, he said most of the interviews were requested by members of Congress, but that he occasionally asked them to come up and talk with him on legislation.

The President, still answering questions, said this situation did not mean he was seeking closer relations with Congress. Close relations always had existed between himself and Congress, he added, despite what the columnists say.

Asked about Senate rejection of his nomination of former Gov. Mon C. Wallgren of Washington as head of the National Security Resources Board, Mr. Truman said he was still backing Wallgren for the same job. He said he never did lie down on people, a fact that the reporters ought to know by now.

He didn't indicate, though, what his next step would be in Wallgren's behalf.

The President said he thought the appointment of Frank L. Graham, liberal president of the University of North Carolina, to the Senate seat of the late J. Melville Broughton was a wonderful appointment. Graham, he declared, is a fine American and a great citizen.

In answer to further questions, Mr. Truman said:

1. He had no present comment on the Senate filibuster that sidetracked his civil rights legislation. He was still hoping, he said, to get the measures through Congress.

2. He was very happy the House recommitted the veterans' pension bill, a move he described as a forward step.

3. He still hoped to induce Gen. Walter Bedell Smith to return to Moscow as U. S. Ambassador.

4. He saw no reason to comment now or in the near future on the situation in China.

Postlude

Laszlo Displays Mature Touch In Benefit for Smith Fund

By Paul Hume

Ervin Lazzlo was almost the youngest person in Constitution Hall last night, and he was the artist of the occasion.

The 16-year-old Hungarian pianist played a benefit recital for Washington's Smith College Scholarship Fund. Lazzlo has great gifts and the promise of a bright future of solid accomplishment.

His program included sonates of Chopin and Beethoven, the Bach Chaconne, novelties of Ross Lee Finney, and short works of Chopin and Liszt. Lazzlo is a pianist who communicates easily and intimately with his instrument. There were many passages in which the piano sang its softest tones. The young artist also commands a lyrical singing tone in soft and full moments.

His phrasing and conception of music is that of a musician, much older than his actual years. Thus the Funeral March in Chopin's B Flat Minor Sonata went with unwonted breadth and feeling. These characteristics were equally pronounced in the entire Beethoven sonata.

Breath and spaciousness were even more apparant in Busoni's version of Bach's Chaconne. Laszlo outlined it with real penetration.

Ross Lee Finney, now enjoying a year's leave of absence from the Smith College faculty, is one of America's best composers for piano. He was represented on the program with A Fantasy, and the first performance of a set of Nostalgic Waltzes. The fantasy is a large work, moody in opening, with a brilliant final section.

The waltzes, reminiscent of Schubert and Ravel in their title, are far more than display pieces. Laszlo played them with the same comprehension he showed throughout the evening. His one fault at present, and one that he can easily outgrow, is to obscure harmonic and even melodic lines with over-pedaling, and to fail at times to articulate clearly certain essential inner voices.

Son of Arkansas Barber Named No. 1 Boy in U. S.

New York, March 24 (AP).—James "Stuffy" Montgomery, 14-year-old son of a Hot Springs, Ark., barber, today was named the No. 1 boy among the 300,000 members of the Boys Clubs of America.

Parents of the "boy of the year" and winner of the junior citizenship award are Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Montgomery.

The selection was made yesterday by a jury of radio, veteran and civic group leaders interested in boys' work.

The Hot Springs High School freshman was named on three counts: Training for citizenship of tomorrow through service to his community; winning his way back to health after a crippling auto accident at the age of six, and being a representative American boy.

Congressmen shave carefully each morning hoping to "be caught in a newsreel that day."

That was reported yesterday by Representative Cotton (R., N. H.) in his weekly newsletter to constituents, "Your Congressman Reports."

"I am dressed and shaved by 8 o'clock. (Every Congressman shaves carefully each morning, hoping he may be caught in a newsreel that day)," it said.

"When I leave my key (at his hotel desk) I receive an armful of mail which I drop in the wastebasket. Mailers of canned propaganda know that if it goes to your office your secretary will weed it out before it gets to you, so they send it to the hotel.

"I used to go through it for fear I would miss an invitation to a free dinner, but now that I am dieting I throw it all away because I know none of it is from home."

Then he lets his readers in on another congressional "service":

"During lunch (in the House restaurant) I would introduce you to a fellow member who would instantly shake your hand and say, 'I want you to know you have a mighty fine Congressman representing you.' That is a little service we perform for each other. It is called 'congressional courtesy.'"

After a very busy day, Cotton returns to his hotel for dinner.

"It is after nine when I am through and put on my slippers and win 18 cents at rummy. Net gain for the day, 18 cents and a few more gray hairs."

Sasscer, Ijams Speak At VFW Meeting Sunday

Posts in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties will participate in the reception of 200 overseas veterans into membership.

Marvel's Resignation Accepted by Truman

President Truman yesterday accepted the resignation of Josiah Marvel, jr., as United States Ambassador to Denmark.

The President's letter to the Ambassador mentioned "family considerations which prompt your desire to leave Copenhagen." He expressed "much regret and reluctance."

Christian M. Ravndal, 50-year-old State Department foreign service director, is one of those most often mentioned to succeed Marvel as Ambassador.

House Rejects Senate Amendments, Sends Rent Control Legislation to Conference

The House refused yesterday to accept Senate amendments to its bill continuing rent controls. The decision will send the measure to a Senate-House conference committee to work out a compromise.

Rent controls will expire next Thursday, unless a compromise can be reached and the bill put on President Truman's desk at that time.

Neither Senate nor House bill makes rent controls as strong or continues them as long as Truman asked.

But Democratic leaders on Capitol Hill described as a "pretty good job" the amended bill approved by the Senate Wednesday night, 68 to 10. They didn't like a provision allowing "home rule" decontrol at any time. The House-approved measure also has a local option clause, although the Senate and House decontrol systems differ in some respects.

The Senate measure permits some rent increases up to 10 per cent. The House measure provides for no percentage rent increases, but stipulated that, so far as practicable, the rent administration must assure a reasonable return on reasonable value of rented property.

Conferees Named

A 15 months continuation is provided by the House bill. Control for "12 to 15" months was voted by the Senate. President Truman asked that the controls be strengthened and contiued for 24 months beyond March 31.

The House appointed as its conferees to meet with the Senate these members of its Banking Committee: Chairman Spence (D., Ky.), Brown (D., Ga.), Patman (D., Tex.), Monroney (D., Okla.), Wolcott (R., Mich.), Gamble (R., N. Y.), and Kunkel (R., Pa.).

The conferees are expected to meet today.

Steel Output Found Overtaking Demand

Steel production is rapidly catching up with demand in many lines, an announcement by the Office of Industrial Cooperation of the Commerce Department yesterday indicated.

The office announced that the allocation of steel productss under the voluntary agreements program will be reduced by more than 150,000 tons monthly, effective in June.

The fact that supplies are available outside the certified plan indicates a growing supply of steel products, plus a lessening demand, steel experts say.

Streetcar Man Cleared In Fatality

A coroner's jury yesterday cleared a Capital Transit street car operator, Joseph Ragland, 27, of 4722 Brandywine st. nw., in the traffic death of a 47-year-old Diamond cab driver early Wednesday morning.

The taxi driver, William W. Cheseldine of 2308 Nichols ave. se., died of a fractured skull at 4:28 a. m., three hours after a streetcar struck him as he walked across the middle of the 100 block of B st. se.

Ragland told police he was traveling 15 to 18 miles per hour at the time of the accident, that it was dark and raining hard. He said he did not see Cheseldine crossing till the man was almost on the tracks.

Tests made at the time of Cheseldine's death revealed there was .25 per cent alcohol in his system at the time of the accident, a state of "possible partial intoxication," according to Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald.

Services for Cheseldine will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday in the Mattingly funeral home, 131 11th st. se. with burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Cost of Living Dips Sharply

20 cities—compared with prewar—second only to Boston.

The cost of living index for Washington stood at 164.1 per cent of 1935-39; Boston was only 161.4 per cent. But the remaining 18 cities were all above Washington, with Seattle being the highest at 174.3 per cent of prewar.

The Washington index was only 0.6 per cent above a year ago. Chiefly responsible was a decrease of 4.1 per cent in food prices in three months which have fallen without interruption since June 1948. Wearing apparel prices dropped 2.3 in the quarter, and house furnishings declined fractionally.

Food prices in Washington dropped 3.6 per cent in the single month, January 15 to February 15. They were down 9.4 per cent from the peak reached last June.

Residential rents went against the trend, as did fuel, electricity and refrigeration, and miscellaneous goods and services—the last affected by higher prices for automobiles.

Nation-wide, clothing declined seventenths of 1 per cent; house furnishings one half of 1 per cent.

Pension Bill Killed By 1 Vote in House

might easily have defeated on a record vote.

But House Majority Leader McCormack (Mass.), who was presiding, overruled Rankin and ordered the rollcall on the motion to recommit.

(Rankin later charges: "This was the damnedest rape of the rules of the House since I've been here.")

Closest Since Draft Vote

The closest record vote since the House extended the Selective Service Act by a 1-vote margin followed. At the end of the first call of the roll, recommit forces were leading by one vote. Then the "no" votes piled up, and when the clerk finished the second call, the recommit motion was trailing.

Two Democratic members—Representatives Barrett and Granahan of Pennsylvania—then stepped into the well of the House and asked that their votes be changed from "no" to "aye."

You could have heard a pin drop as McCormack announced Teague's motion was defeated, 208 to 209. Then McCormack, acting on his own initiative, ordered a recapitulation of the vote. He said the count was so close he would have ordered the recheck if the vote had broken the other way.

House recapitulations are for correction purposes only and McCormack announced that no member would be permitted to switch his vote on this tally.

When the clerks finished making it, the 209 votes against recommittal had dropped to 207, one less than the number needed to revive the bill. It was later explained that through an error, the original "No" votes of Barrett and Granahan had never been subtracted from the "against" column.

Tattered Scrap of Original

Thus the Rankin bill, which in its original form would have paid $90-a-month pensions at age 65 to all veterans of both World Wars other than those dishonorably discharged, regardless of the need of the veteran, went back to the committee that had reported it out over vigorous Administration protests.

In its original form, it would have cost some 125 billion dollars over a 50-year-period. But it was a tattered scrap of the Rankin bill that went back to the committee yesterday.

A "needs clause" had been written into it and for the $90-a-month pensions the House in three days of haphazard voting had substituted sliding scale pensions based on length of service that in their effect would have heavily favored World War II over World War I servicemen.

In fact, the bill was in such shape that none could estimate its cost and few could guess at its effect.

Roll Call on Pension Vote

House Refuses to Kill Maryland Bonus Bill

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., March 24—After one of the most vitriolic exchanges in years, the Maryland House of Delegates today refused to kill the 100-million-dollar soldiers' bonus.

A similar measure was defeated in the Senate last night, 15-14.

The bill was petitioned out of the House Ways and Means Committee and put on the floor today. An attempt to apply the clincher, by tabling it then and there, lost by 78 to 37.

Before the bill was finally sent back to the committee for further consideration, personalities were exchanged on the House floor to a degree which amazed veteran observers.

At the outset of today's debate, Delegate John F. McNulty (D., Anne Arundel) moved to have the bill adopted on second reading and in quick succession motions were made to refer the bill back to committee, lay the bill on the table and adjourn for the day.

Speaker C. Ferdinand Sybert (D., Howard) ruled that the motion to table indefinitely had priority and a roll-call vote was begun.

Delegate Benjamin A. Mrozinski (D., Baltimore) touched off the furious debate when he rose to explain his vote against tabling the measure.

"I had hoped I would not have to rise because I am going to be ashamed of what I am about to say," he said, adding:

"When the draft came I was so scared I couldn't enjoy my meals. I didn't have the guts to bear arms against the enemy, and I'm man enough to admit it."

During the war he was in an essential industry, he explained.

Turning wrathfully to Delegate Oliver R. Guyther (D., St. Mary's), a Naval officer during World War II who made the motion to table, Mrozinski accused him of bad faith to veterans by supporting reduced corporation taxes but not the bonus, and "not being a man."

Some of those opposing the bonus today were multiplying their millions at home during the war, the Baltimore delegate shouted.

Delegate C. Lyman Schueler (D., Baltimore) then made a bitter personal attack against Mrozinski.

Waving his arms and pounding his desk, Schueler accused Mrozinski of "sordid and cheap motives."

"The veteran to him is merely a vote," he said. "Veterans are a body of voters to be exploited for personal political profit. I deplore his action and I renounce my association with him which cosponsorship of this bill might then voted to re-refer the bonus bill back to committee.

Midway through the debate, the completed roll call showed 78 delegates against tabling the measure and 37 in favor. The House otherwise imply."

After the action, Mrozinski angrily demanded the floor and replying to Schueler's attack explained he was elected to represent his district and "pledged, because of my own experience, to help the veterans."

He added: "I didn't intend to offend anyone." He also scathingly pointed out Schueler was appointed to fill a vacancy—not elected.

Rising to defend Delegate Guyther, Delegate Paul M. Beckwith (D., Baltimore) observed that the delegate was "among the most admired and respected in this legislative body." The House applauded.

Just before the arguments ended, Delegate Leroy W. Preston (D., Baltimore), chairman of the Baltimore City delegation and an Army major who served in the China-Burma-India theater, rose, obviously perturbed. Speaking with deep emotion, he declared: "Some of the things said here today have desecrated the memory of the war dead of Maryland and I apologize for them."

He then walked from the chamber.

Social Security Stamps Urged

"destitution," Altmeyer said, the insurance program should be expanded to include six million farm operators; 7,700,000 urban self-employed (lawyers, doctors, businessmen, etc.); three million domestic or household workers, and 4,700,000 hired farm workers.

The categories of employed persons he listed were skipped when the Social Security Act first was passed 12 years ago because of administrative difficulties, particularly in the collection of the tax.

Altmeyer said this problem has been licked, largely by the idea of a stampbook system. He explained it this way:

"Under such a system each employe would receive a stampbook in which stamps would be placed by his employer to evidence contributions made by the employer and the worker.

"In rural areas the employer could purchase these stamps from the mail carrier, and in urban areas they could be purchased at postoffices. A stamp plan could be used also by small industrial and commercial establishments which found it more convenient.

May Use Industry Plan

"For regular workers on large-scale farms, where pay records are already kept, the system of reporting now used in industry might be most convenient.

"For the rest—that is, for the workers on small farms and the temporary help employed during rush seasons—it might be more convenient to use a stamp plan.

"Whenever he paid his workers, the farmer could place special social security insurance stamps in books carried by the workers. Half the cost of these stamps would be borne by the employe.

"The books would be accepted by the Social Security Administration as evidence of earnings, and the farmer would not need to make any report or keep any special records for the purpose."

It is assumed that the same plan would work for the household servant—with the housewife operating the stamp system when she paid her maid.

But the great bulk of social security taxes still would be collected through levies on employes' pay and employers' payrolls. Altmeyer said most of the farm operators and city self-employed, if they were brought under the program, could report their income, for purposes of social security coverage, as part of the income tax returns.

Wants Others Included

The Administration also wants brought into the program public employes, workers for nonprofit organizations and those salesmen, insurance agents and others excluded last year.

Altmeyer proposed that all World War II veterans be given wage credits for their service, in computing social security benefits.

A survey of House Ways and Means Committeemen indicated yesterday that this group is ready to reject flatly the President's plan to extend direct Federal financial aid or "home relief" to all needy persons, including the unemployed. Such relief now is limited to the needy aged, the blind and to dependent children.

Melishes Ask Court To Block Removal

Answer to Suit

Court Asked To Advise Wife's Return

Declaring that he still loves his wife and wants her back, Alexander Perlov, 54, of Norwood, Md., yesterday asked the Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md., to persuade her to return to him with their three children.

Mrs. Jeanette Perlov, 27-year-old former waitress, last week asked separate maintenance, alleging that Perlov had tried to drive her insane by repeatedly telling her she was a homicidal maniac and accusing her of adultery. She charged he also forced her to sign away her interest in his estate, which she estimated at $100,000. Perlov owns two farms at Norwood.

In Perlov's answer, filed by Attorneys Thomas and J. Sumner Wood of Rockville, Perlov contends that his wife "went haywire" after the birth of their youngest child, Phillip, 1 year. Perlov asserts she threatened to kill him and also take all of his money.

Perlov asked the court to set aside temporary alimony granted her last week, deny permanent alimony, and to persuade her to return to him and undergo such treatment as is "desirable" for complete restoration of her health.

New York, March 24 (NYHT.).—The Rev. Dr. John Howard Melish and his son, the Rev. William Howard Melish, asked Justice Alfred V. Norton in State Supreme Court today for a temporary injunction to block Dr. Melish's removal on April 4 as rector of Holy Trinity Church, Brooklyn.

Justice Norton reserved decision. The removal order was issued by the Rt. Rev. James Pernette de Wolfe, Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Long Island. The younger Mr. Melish's work as chairman of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship precipitated the order.

At the hearing the younger Mr. Melish introduced an affidavit in which he denied ever being a Communist or a member of the Communist Party.

He said the national council, whose chairmanship he gave up on March 16, "is not an organization to promote . . . Communism. It's purpose is to promote peace rather than war between Russia and the United States."

Jackson A. Dykman, lawyer for Bishop de Wolfe, told the court the Melishes were "defying" the bishop's removal order.

He said that in so doing they were violating their ordination vows to obey him and hinted that they may face church proceedings "on the ground of conduct unbecoming to a priest."

Bill Requests 2d Judgeship

should be done at once to meet the needs of the Juvenile Court.

At this February meeting, the committee decided the best way to handle the delicate problem was to seek a second judgeship, thus permitting Miss Bentley to serve out her full term even though she never returns to the bench.

It also pointed out that the court's work has "materially increased in the past 10 years to a point where the services of an additional judge have become necessary." This was secondary to the fact of Judge Bentley's indefinite illness.

In his letter to congressional leaders, Davis noted that the proposed bill to create a second judgeship would leave such an appointment a discretionary matter on and after Judge Bentley's term ends in 1952.

Deductions Taken from Pay

Regular civil service retirement deductions have been taken from Judge Bentley's pay since she has been on the bench, Davis said. But, he said, it is not clear whether she would be able to draw retirement pay at the end of her term. The Bar Association, in accordance with a recommendation of its Juvenile Court committee, is expected to take steps to "preserve and protect any and all rights" Judge Bentley may have to retirement or disability pay, Davis added.

The bill to create a second judgeship in the Juvenile Court would establish Juvenile Court pay rates at the Municipal Court rate. Municipal judges now receive $9975 a year while Judge Bentley receives $10,000 annually.

The bill also would make the Juvenile Court appointments, made by the President, for 10 instead of 6 years. The bill specifically states that Judge Bentley's present term will end in 1952. She would, of course, be eligible for reappointment.

At the time it was learned Judge Bentley entered St. Elizabeth's, court officials said it would be several months, at least, before she could return to the bench. But the bas association inquiry appears to have made clear that there now is no possibility of her return.

Columnist Is 'Beaned'

she said as she dumped the soup.

While startled patrons looked on and waiters rushed up with napkins, Miss Carpenter stamped out. Coffin dripped bean soup from his hands, nose and ears.

Coffin's item, she said later, was an insult not only to herself but to the whole profession of women photographers.

"Being a girl photographer is plenty hard," she said. You run into ideas that all a girl photographer is good for is to tease and smile and coy people. I don't have to tease and smile to get my pictures."

An ironic facet of the incident was that Coffin thought he was doing Miss Carpenter a favor in running the item. A friend of hers, he said, had come to him and asked some publicity for Miss Carpenter, who is a free-lance.

In his column Coffin said Miss Carpenter "talks her subjects into putting on makeup" in her character studies of the greats of Washington." He said she "studies the subject's face before she gets out her make-up kit and plasters on the goo." Her technique, Coffin said, made McKellar look like "a benevolent college president" and showed Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.) standing "with his hand on the globe, as if he'd discovered it."

"I haven't the slightest idea what she threw the soup for," he said, "unless it was to get herself more publicity."

Besides drenching Coffin, Miss Carpenter's soup also spattered a couple of other patrons, one at another table six feet away. Miss Carpenter said, without regret, that she was shelling out $15 in cleaning bills.

"I also paid for the soup and left a tip," she said.

During five years here, three covering the White House for a syndicate, Miss Carpenter has photographed a good deal of official Washington from President Truman on down. When the lightning rods on the Goddess of Freedom atop the Capitol dome were being changed she said she was the only photographer to climb the ladder to get pictures of it.

"If I had nerve enough to do that," she said, "I had nerve enough to throw that soup."

The bean soup affair is not the first time the names of Coffin and Miss Carpenter have been crossed. A few weeks ago a car owned by Miss Carpenter but driven at the time by someone else was ticketed for parking abreast. The ticket came to the Police Department for adjustment through the House District Committee with Coffin's name on it. Coffin said then that he was not driving the car.

12 Oystermen Fined In Eastern Shore Case

Annapolis, March 24 (AP).—Twelve Eastern Shore oystermen today were fined $50 to $150 apiece when they pleaded guilty of using power yawls to push their sailboats while oystering in Chesapeake Bay near the mouth of the Patuxent River.

The men were arrested when a Tidewater Fisheries Commission enforcement plane spotted them February 24.

Columbia Plans To Cut Price of Popular Records

New York, March 24 (AP).—New shots were fired today in the battle of phonograph records between Columbia Records, Inc., and RCA Victor.

Columbia, subsidiary of the Columbia Boardcasting System, notified dealers it would announce a price reduction March 31 on its conventional type records that spin at 78 revolutions a minute.

Trade circles said Columbia would cut 10-inch popular records from 75 cents to 60 cents. That would be the same price as for the 7-inch record of Columbia's long-playing line with a speed of 33 1-3 r. p. m., and 5 cents below the price of a popular record in RCA Victor's new 45 R. P. M. line.

Public Expects Drop In Living Costs

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., March 24.—For the first time in many months a majority of Americans see relief ahead from the high cost of living.

At regular intervals the American Institute of Public Opinion has polled the nation on the question:

"Do you think that prices, in general, will be higher, lower, or about the same six months from now?"

As recently as last December, at the height of Christmas buying season, only one-third of all voters questioned believed that prices would go lower. The change of attitude since is seen in the results of the latest survey. The comparison with December follows:

Higher ...	9%	18%
Lower	51	33
About same	31	39
No opinion	9	10

The poll is a measure of underlying public psychology regarding prices, but is obviously not a forecast of economic trends.

In August, 1946, the overwhelming majority of voters polled said they thought prices would go up during the next six months. That guess turned out to be dead right.

In today's survey the group most optimistic about price drops are the voters who had a college education

B-36 May Test Navy Planes

By James J. Strebig
Associated Press Aviation Reporter

Could Navy fighters shoot down the B-36 bomber in the stratosphere—where the Air Force says jets can't touch it?

The Air Force may make tests to find out. Navy fighters are built to different standards than land-based planes.

The Air Force has made no secret of its belief that the B-36, operating unescorted at 40,000 feet and higher, is a virtually "unsinkable" as far as present-type fighters are concerned.

Several hundred tests have been made using jet fighters, principally the F-80 Shooting Star. The jet planes require about 23 minutes to climb to altitude, their engines have only about one fourth power when up and their small wings give them less maneuverability than the big bomber.

Navy planes are built to use less than 500 feet of deck. They are powered for quick climb, and Navy jets have auxiliary boosts known as afterburners that give them a double push in emergencies.

Leo G. Schmelzer, who recently quit George Washington University Hospital to join the Public Health Service, has accepted instead the post of administrator at Garfield Hospital.

Schmelzer

Announcement of the change was made yesterday by William R. Castle, Garfield president, with public thanks to PHS officials "who relinquished their claim" to Schmeltzer.

Castle further disclosed that the hospital will immediately embark on a $75,000 renovation project to improve its buildings.

"Duty to Begin April 1

Schmeltzer resigned as administrator at the new GWU Hospital early in February to take a top hospital planning and inspection post with PHS. He remained on duty at GWU, however, until about 10 days ago, and never actually began PHS service, it was explained.

He will begin duty at Garfield on April 1, succeeding Arkel B. Cook, who resigned there the first of this month to accept a similar post at Evanston (Ill.) Hospital, Castle said.

The hospital president said Schmelzer who directed much of the planning of the new GWU hospital, recently surveyed Garfield's physical facilities and recommended the renovations to be made.

Merger Planned

The repairs are vitally needed, Castle said, to maintain the hospital's physical plant "in first-class condition until we move, if ever, into our new building."

It is planned that Garfield, Emergency and Episcopal Hospitals will merge to form the proposed Washington Hospital Center, a multi-million dollar institution to be constructed on grounds now occupied by Naval Observatory facilities here.

Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn, dean of the GWU Medical School, said officials had been negotiating with an applicant to succeed to Schmelzer's administrative post at GWU's hospital. His name was withheld pending final decision.

To Speak Saturday

The Right Rev. A. B. Kinsolving, Bishop of Arizona, will speak at a dinner of the Old Boys' Association of the Episcopal High School, Alexandria, Va. at the Penn-Daw Hotel, Alexandria, at 6:30 p. m. Saturday.

Committee Clears New Sales Tax Bill

W. Smith (D., Va.) took the lead in pushing the new sales tax bill.

Of the six in the anti-sales tax group, only Kennedy missed voting against the measure in the committee's roll call. He left early to vote in the Labor Committee on the labor bill.

Klein protested later that "we never got an opportunity to present our income tax program, we only had an hour and the sales tax was practically railroaded through the committee."

In a final tense five minutes, members said the pay bill was called up. According to Klein, an effort to stall action by parliamentary maneuvers was beaten down.

Representative Davis (D., Ga.) said he made the formal motion to report the pay measure. He is chairman of the subcommittee in charge of police and fire legislation.

Estimates of District Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler, on the revenue which would be produced by the sales tax measure, and by the minority income tax measure were released.

For the committee sales tax bill, the full year yield for the sales tax was calculated at $15,345,000. If the bill is passed by May 1, and the sales tax starts operating July 1, 11 months collections in the 1950 fiscal year would produce $14,066,250.

The 15-cent property tax rate increase was expected to yield $2,400,000 a year. Another $490,000 a year would come from the 50 per cent increase in liquor license fees.

From the change in the unincorporated business tax exemption, the District would get $800,000 a year.

Total first year yield of the bill was estimated at $17,756,250.

The substitute bill, sponsored by Granger and the other five anti-sales tax members, was estimated to increase the annual income tax revenue by $7,800,000 and the property tax revenue by five million dollars, for a total of $12,800,000.

"Come on, get your back into it!"

Lewis Advises 450,000 Miners to Return To Pits Monday, Warns of Contract Battle

John L. Lewis yesterday advised some 450,000 idle miners to return to work Monday, but at the same time warned them to tighten up their belts for the expected bitter battle over new contract negotiations this spring.

"The signs indicate that you will have to fight again during the year of 1949," Lewis declared in an "executive communication" to the membership of the United Mine Workers.

"So each of you will do well to prepare for it."

The current contract between the United Mine Workers and the coal mine operators runs through June 30. This year's vacation period for the miners runs from June 25 through July 4. The miners have traditionally maintained a "no contract, no work" attitude.

Thus, the Lewis message to his miners appears to emphasize that the miners will not return to the coal pits following their June 25-July 4 vacation unless UMW and operators reach a new agreement before the latter date.

The Lewis directive that the miners east of the Mississippi—end their two-week "memorial period" on Monday as orginally scheduled was disclosed only a few hours before Dr. James Boyd was formally sworn in as director of the United States Bureau of Mines.

John L. had called the "memorial period," he has stated, to mourn for the miners killed and injured during 1948 and to protest the President's naming of Boyde to head the Mines Bureau.

The UMW chief had successfully blocked Senate confirmation of Boyd, whom he charges is unqualified for the post, for nearly two years. The Senate quickly confirmed Dr. Boyd shortly after the "memorial period" walkout began, but only after the Administration narrowly averted defeat on the issue in the Senate Interior Committee.

President Truman had nominated Dr. Boyd, former dean of the Colorado School of Mines, upon the recommendation of Secretary of Interior Julius A. Krug, who served as U. S. Coal Administrator during several recent periods in which the Federal Government seized and operated the mines. Lewis' opposition to Boyd, it is generally believed, stems from his intense hostility to Secretary Krug.

Yesterday, at the swearing in exercises for Dr. Boyd, attended by approximately 1000 Bureau of Mines and Interior Department employes, Secretary Krug declared that the ceremony was "indeed a happy occasion," for the department and "for the Nation."

"The poor fellow worked for two years with only an official title to live on," Krug said, referring to the fact that Boyd could not receive his $10,000-a-year pay without Senate confirmation.

Dr. Boyd, trimly built and standing shoulders squared, received two large installments of the 15-months pay due him immediately after the oath taking. Altogether $12,600 in salary is coming to him. Boyd's wife and two of his four children attended the ceremony.

Secretary Krug said he had met "Jim" Boyd during the war, and was impressed by the latter's work in lining up key metals for the Army. It was then he first tried to bring Boyd into the Federal service, Krug said.

Dr. Boyd, a native of Australia, expressed the hope that "the issue has been settled."

In ordering the miners back to work Monday, Lewis said:

"Our membership should be congratulated for their understanding of the important issues involved in the present policy. The volume of abuse and denunciation of the mineworkers and their officers, released by the coal operators, financial interests and hostile political elements, has rarely been exceeded in magnitude or malignancy . . ."

Some observers believe that among the "important issues" involved in the "memorial period" were not only commemoration of the 1948 mine casualties and the protest against Dr. Boyd, but also a move to decrease abnormally high coal stockpiles above ground; to dramatize the need for Federal safety enforcement laws in mines; and to seek a bituminous coal industry work allocation plan in the face of diminishing coal demand.

Lewis warned in his message to the miners that "lessening productivity of the Nation has encouraged powerful . . . interests to believe that your union and its wages structure and your living standards may be successfully attacked. Your welfare fund . . . will also be placed in jeopardy."

Suit Questions How Far AEC Can Go in Guarding Secrets

How far can the Atomic Energy Commission go in its efforts to safeguard atomic secrets?

That, basically, is the question posed before Judge F. Dickinson Letts in District Court yesterday.

The question came up in an action filed by the United Electrical Workers (CIO) against the Atomic Energy Commission and General Electric Corp.

Last fall, the Atomic Energy Commission ordered General Electric to cancel its collective bargaining contract with the union covering GE plants in Schenectady engaged in atomic projects.

The commission's order was based upon alleged communistic affiliation or association by various officers of the UE, and their failure to sign anti-Communist affidavits as provided by the Taft-Hartley Act.

United Electrical Workers asked for an injunction to nullify the Atomic Energy Commission's order, and at the same time asked for damages of one million dollars from the AEC and GE for violation of the union's constitutional and contractual rights. The Atomic Energy Commission and General Electric yesterday asked dismissal of the suit.

Edward H. Hickey, special assistant attorney general, representing the Atomic Energy Commission, argued that the UE officers suspected of Communist sympathies exercise disciplinary authority over the UE local in Schenectady.

Therefore, Hickey asserted, "there is a very serious question as to whether representation of atomic energy workers at Schenectady by a union in which such officers occupied important positions, is consistent with that full and unqualified adherence and loyalty to the interests of the United States required by national security and the Atomic Energy Act of 1946."

Hickey declared that union officers exercising administrative, negotiating, and disciplinary authority over members working on atomic energy projects could, if they were so disposed, affect the labor relations on an atomic energy project so that the work could be slowed down or curtailed.

"Thus, a union officer or one who was not loyal to the interests of the United States could precipitate a strike actually in the interests of a foreign power, but avowedly for legitimate trade union purposes and accepted as such by union members," Hickey told the court.

"At the present juncture of world affairs, such a risk is too dangerous to be run in our atomic energy program."

Had No Alternative

General Electric, represented by Attorney John F. Sonnett, argued that GE had no alternative but to carry out the Atomic Energy Commission's order at once, even though such as order might be found illegal later in the courts.

Otherwise, Sonnett contended, the Atomic Energy Commission would be rendered powerless in its security activities, "the most vital aspect of its work."

After the Government and GE presented their arguments for dismissal of the petition, former Assistant Attorney General O. John Rogge, argued the plea of the United Electrical Workers.

Rogge charged, in effect, that the AEC and GE have gotten together on a mission of "union busting." AEC and GE, he said, were using the phrase "atomic energy" as "the open sesame to destroy unions and the Constitution of the United States."

Atom Dust in Eyes, He Says

Atomic dust is being thrown into the eyes of the American people in order to violate the First Amendment to the Constitution, "which guarantee our freedoms and which is the most important thing in our lives," Rogge declared. He asserted that the right to organized and bargain collectively was one of the freedoms guaranteed by the First Amendment.

Altogether, Rogge said, there were some 300 UE members working at the General Electric plants engaged in atomic energy projects in Schenectady. Every one of these in any way connected with the projects has previously been cleared for loyalty by both the FBI and the AEC, Rogge declared.

This being so, Rogge argued, why was it necessary for the AEC also to order cancellation of the GE Collective bargaining contract with the United Electrical Workers?

The CIO, acting as "friend of the court," filed a brief in support of the United Electrical Workers' postion. The CIO declared it agrees that the security of atomic energy installations must be safeguarded, but that the action of the Atomic Energy Commission "extends beyond the proper requirements of national security."

The case will be continued in Judge Letts' courtroom this morning, with Rogge continuing the union argument.

'Fair Deal' Labor Relations Bill Approved By House Committee Following Close Call

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The Administration's Fair Deal labor relations bill was approved without amendment by the House Labor Committee yesterday, but only after the measure barely escaped being indefinitely bottled up in committee.

A hurry-up call for Representative John F. Kennedy (D., Mass.), who was attending a sales tax session of the House District Committee, saved the day for the Administration.

The committee had voted 12-11 to delay immediate and unqualified approval of the Lesinski management-labor relations bill and instead take up the bill section by section with full discussion on amendments.

At this point Committee Chairman John Lesinski (D., Mich.) cast a proxy vote for Representative Kennedy against the motion to discuss the bill. When members of the committee protested against the validity of an oral proxy, Kennedy was rushed in to cast his vote in person.

Kennedy's ballot made the final tally on the move to consider the measure section by section a 12-12 tie, and therefore, the motion failed to carry.

Earlier when Representative Augustine B. Kelley (D., Pa.) moved immediate okay for the Lesinski bill, 27-year-old Hugo S. Sims (D., S. C.), who had announced his support for the Lesinski bill—offered a substitute to permit discussion of amendments in the full committee. Sims had stated he has no amendments of his own to offer, but that he felt the Lesinski bill should not be rushed through the full committee without an opportunity for debate by those opposing it.

Sims' substitute motion received the support of all nine Republican members of the committee plus the votes of Reps. Graham A. Barden, of North Carolina, and Wingate H. Lucas, of Texas, both Democrats.

Another Southern Democrat, John S. Wood, of Georgia, who heretofore has usually voted with the Republican bloc, showed up late for the committee meeting and was absent when the critical vote took place.

The nine Republicans who voted with Sims, Barden, and Lucas to hold up the Lesinski bill for debate are Sam McConnell, of Pennsylvania; Ralph W. Gwinn, of New York; Walter E. Brehm, of Ohio; Wint Smith, of Kansas; Carroll D. Kearns, of Pennsylvania; Richard M. Nixon, of California; T. B. Morton, of Kentucky; Thomas H. Werdel, of California; and Harold H. Velde, of Illinois.

The twelve Democrats who voted from the begining to get quick action, without amendments, on the labor bill were Lesinski, Kelley, Powell, Kennedy; Cleveland H. Bailey, of West Virginia; Leonard Irving, of Missouri; Carl D. Perkins, of Kentucky; Charles R. Howell, of New Jersey; Andrew Jacobs, of Indiana; Thomas H. Burke, of Ohio; Tom Steed, of Oklahoma; and Roy W. Weir, of Minnesota.

When the Sims vote failed to carry, Representative McConnell, the ranking Republican member of the committee, moved to substitute the Woods bill for the Lesinski bill.

The Lesinski bill would repeal the Taft-Hartley Act and restore the Wagner Act with "improvements" suggested by President Truman. The Woods bill would retain the Taft-Hartley Act and amend it without basic change as recommended by the joint congressional "watchdog" committee created under the Taft-Hartley Act to study the operations of the law.

This anti-Administration measure was defeated 13-11, with the youthful Sims returning to the Fair Deal Democratic fold, and Woods still absent.

The committee then voted 13-10 to report out the Lesinski bill at once and, with Sims again voting with the Fair Dealers. Lucas voted with the nine Republicans; Barden merely voted "present." Woods was still missing.

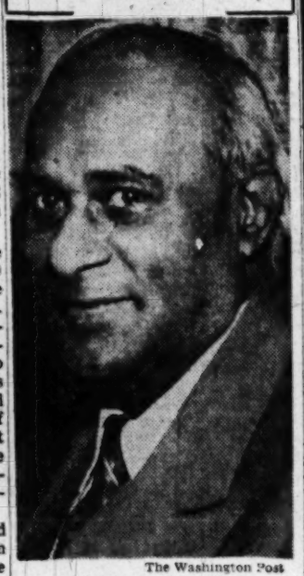
Guiana-Born Ex-Teacher Sues for Job



The Washington Post
JOSEPH N. GOWNDER
Presents a problem

The difficulties of a Guiana-born teacher who lost his job because he could not get citizenship papers yesterday presented the District with a complicated legal problem.

Joseph N. Gownder, whom the Bureau of Naturalization classifies as an Oriental and the Board of Education as a Negro, filed suit in Municipal Court asking for restoration of his job as a teacher or return of retirement contributions he paid over a 20-year period while teaching in District schools.

The 67-year-old teacher, who lives at 1008 Euclid st. nw., said in the suit that he was fired from his job as a teacher of Spanish at Cardozo High School in October, 1942 because he was not a citizen. Basis of his firing was the District Appropriations Act of 1941 which prohibited use of funds to pay salaries of teachers not citizens or who had not filed for citizenship.

The suit said that Gownder was prevented from taking out papers because he entered the country as an Oriental and came under provisions of the Oriental Exclusion Act. He was classified as an Oriental because his parents were born in the East Indies, although he was born in Georgetown, British Guiana.

On his appointment to the District schools in 1922, shortly after coming to the United States, he was assigned by the Board of Education to Negro schools.

A year after he was fired from his job, the suit says, Gownder was told by the Board of Education he would remain eligible for reappointment if he could get his citizenship within five years. This he said he was able to do in May, 1947, after Congress relaxed the Exclusion Act.

Lane Proposes Matching Funds to Construct Montgomery and Prince Georges Schools

By a Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., March 24.—Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties would share generously under a 20-million-dollar matching fund for school construction proposed tonight by Governor Lane.

The move, an answer to recent unprecedented demands from counties for more State school aid, would be in addition to a 50-million-dollar credit pool proposed by the Governor last week.

If the Governor's latest plan is approved, Montgomery would receive $1,260,540 as an outright grant and Prince Georges $1,642,800.

But each county, like others throughout the State, would have to put up $3 of their own funds for school construction for every dollar received from the State.

The 20-million-dollar grant would be distributed on the basis of $60 for each school child in the county. Prince Georges has 27,380 pupils, and Montgomery 21,009.

"It has become apparent that there is a need for a measure of assistance other than use of the State's credit to meet an immediately impending crisis in school construction," Gov. Lane declared.

The Governor also reiterated earlier statements that the additional 50-million-dollar credit pool would enable counties to borrow through it "at interest rates from 1 to 1½ per cent lower than they would be required to pay on local bond issues."

Both plans are subject to approval by the General Assembly now nearing the end of its 1949 session.

More than 1000 Marylanders appeared last Monday at a public hearing to demand quadrupling of the State's incentive fund but Gov. Lane has consistently opposed such a move.

Governor Lane estimated the following amounts, under the 20-million-dollar plan, could go to the Southern Maryland counties: St. Marys, $154,140; Calvert, $155,580; Charles, $266,460; Anne Arundel, $1,054,860.

Under the 50-million-dollar credit-pool plan, he estimated the following would be available: Montgomery, $8,918,000; Prince Georges, $6,351,000; St. Marys, $763,000; Anne Arundel, $4,261,000; Colvert, $540,000 and Charles, $915,000.

Liquor Bills Approved

The development highlighted a day which also saw unexpected, but only tentative, approval in the Senate of two bills which would (1) transfer appointive powers of the Montgomery Liquor Control Board from the Governor to the County Council, and (2) transfer title to the County Liquor Dispensary Building to the County Council.

Favorable committee reports on the bills were adopted but because the county's Democratic organization leader, E. Brooke Lee, opposed them, they are expected to be killed in the Senate by administration leaders and followers.

Mrs. Leona M. Rush (R., Montgomery) also introduced today a bill giving the council authority to increase retirement pay of 27 former county teachers receiving inadequate pensions because they were retired at a much lower pay scale than now exists.

Navy X-Rays Anchor . . .

U. S. Navy Photo

VOLTS BY THE MILLION—Landon Burt of Silver Spring and Edward Crisuolo of Philadelphia, phisical science aide, and radiologist, respectively, prepare to X-ray a 17,000-pound steel anchor with the 10,000-volt betatron (background) at the Naval Ordnance Laboratory, White Oaks, Md. The Navy showed yesterday how the ultra modern gadget can peer through 16 inches of steel

Navy Exhibits X-Ray Capable Of Piercing 16 Inches of Steel

The Navy showed off its newest X-ray vision yesterday, its 10-million volt mobile betatron for peering through 16-inch steel at the Naval Ordnance Laboratory, White Oak, Md.

Occasion for the demonstration was the opening session of a special symposium on non-destructive testing methods, attended by some 350 scientists.

Also opened for inspection was the Radiology Section, or Building 70 of the 35-million-dollar installation situated on a 938-acre tract in Montgomery County. Some $300,000 worth of X-ray and fluoroscope machines, including the $95,000 betatron, are housed in the special building.

17,000-Pound Anchor

The General Electric betatron most powerful mobile unit of its kind yet produced, was put to work, examining the interior of a 17,000-pound anchor destined for use on a cruiser. Rays from the betatron, the laboratory's scientists said, will tell them whether the anchor can withstand a 60,000-pound pull, the job for which it was cast.

Donald T. O'Connor, civilian head of the X-ray facility, explained that up until now such massive ship and ordnance parts could not be pre-tested for hidden flaws. Ship crankshafts, armor piercing projectiles and heavy armor plate are among other components that heretofore defied accurate test, he said.

Also on exhibit yesterday were the smaller X-ray machines, including a two-million-volt unit, suitable for X-raying through 8 inches of steel. Such machines, developed for war use by the laboratory, formerly held the record for X-ray tests.

Scientists attending yesterday's symposium were greeted in special ceremonies at the laboratory auditorium by Rear Admiral Frank E. Beatty, commanding officer, and R. D. Bennett, civilian, technical director of the installation.

Dr. C. S. Piggot, member of the National Research and Development Board, a guest speaker, recounted the wartime triumphs of the Navy laboratory's technicians in inspecting and testing both Allied and enemy ordnance with X-rays.

The speaker disclosed how X-rays unfolded the mystery of how a number of rockets were found mis-assembled, their nozzles inside reversed. A few, he said, were found with two nozzles.

"These were traced to a particular laborer," Piggot declared. "He explained to the inspectors that he had forgotten how the gentleman said they were to be put in, and he had played safe by pointing one forward, the other aft."

X-ray pictures, both ordinary and stereoscopic, enabled American experts to learn much of foreign equipment without disturbing the adjustment, said Piggot. This was particularly valuable to bomb-disposal squads who had "a personal and vital interest in their jobs."

Science Finds Drug to Outdo Streptomycin

Discovery of a new antibiotic which promises to outdo the wonder-working streptomycin was reported yesterday by two New Jersey scientists.

The potent bacteria-killer, named neomycin, was isolated from soil samplings at the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station, Rutgers University, in the same laboratory that first produced streptomycin five years ago.

Specifically, its discoverers said neomycin has this advantage over its predecessor—it kills the tuberculosis and other disease organisms which can build up resistance to streptomycin.

Streptomycin's disappointing fault, physicians have reported, is that its initial wonder work in ridding the body of tuberculosis is too often nullified between the first and third month of treatment when the disease organism builds up a resistance to the antibiotic. This has been overcome, in part, by administering it in combination with other drugs.

Neomycin, its finders report, has not shown this fault, either in laboratory tests or in animal experiments.

Reporting on their discovery were Drs. Selman A. Waksman, professor of microbiology, and Hubert A. Lechevalier, research biochemist, both of the State university. The findings are published today in Science, weekly publication of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

2 Liquor Applications Denied

Following "outraged protests" by more than a score of Bladensburg residents, the Prince Georges County liquor board yesterday turned down two applications for alcoholic beverage licenses there.

After hearing opposition from spokesmen representing Bladensburg churches, P-TAs, citizens' associations, American Legion, and the Town Council, the board denied beer, wine and liquor off-sale applications by Parthia M. Rea, Rope Walk Liquor Shoppe, 5431 Annapolis rd., and Meyer Bobrow, J. & M. Liquors, 5419 Annapolis rd.

Board Chairman William H. Brooke noted that Bladensburg residents had made "outraged protests" against the license requests. "These people don't want their town converted into a 'rum row' and we agree with them," Brooke said.

Mayor Andrew F. Gasch declared residents of the community were "absolutely opposed" to granting of additional permits in or near the town. "We have sufficient places to take care of the need," he said.

Suspended for one week, beginning at close of business Saturday, was the license of Kaywood Liquors, 2205 Varnum st., Mount Rainier. The proprietor, Max Kay, was convicted February 8 in Hyattsville Police Court of selling beer to a minor.

Lake Success, N. Y., March 24 (U.P.).—The United Nations Security Council will resume its debate on Trieste Monday afternoon, it was announced today.

Judge Refuses Ruffner Will Rehearing

Luray, Va., March 24 (Spl.).—A petition for rehearing of the case involving the will of Lester Ruffner, who left most of his $5800 estate to the Communist Party, was denied today.

The petition, denied by Judge A. H. Hopkins in Page County Circuit Court, had also asked the court to set aside a previous ruling in which Ruffner, Communist Party leader, was declared interstate and his property was declared to his widow, Mrs. Lucy Ruffner of Luray.

Reads Lengthy Opinion

Judge Hopkins read a lengthy opinion in which he discussed the philosophy of Russian Communism and American Democracy.

"I am of the opinion," he said, "that a gift or device in trust to any of our political parties could not be administered as a charitable trust under the laws of Virginia, thuogh I do not rest a decision in this case on this point.

He added that he was basing his decision on his belief that the Communist Party is "illegal" and violates the criminal laws of our country.

Judge Hopkins told attorneys that, in effect, his ruling gives the property to Mrs. Ruffner as was done in the original case. He said the decree will give the petitioners, Alice Burke of Richmond and Daniel Kibler of Luray, Ruffner's nephew, reasonable time for appeal.

By Inductive Philosophy

In his opinion, Judge Hopkins said, "It seems to me that the only method by which a decision could be reached in this case is by inductive philosophy. I have endeavored to set forth as succinctly as the nature of this case would permit the process of reasoning which I have employed."

The opinion also said, "I am further of the opinion that the objectives of the Communist Party, as odious as they have been pictured, are not unconstitutional."

Tie Vote Halts 4th Attack on Md. U. Budget

By a Post Reporter

Annapolis, March 24.—A fourth attempt to require the University of Maryland to submit detailed instead of lump-sum budget estimates failed today.

Pending in the House Ways and Means Committee was a bill sponsored by Delegate Jerome Robinson (D., Baltimore), which would require the detailed budget procedure of all State departments. This would include the College Park institution.

Moving for a favorable committee report, Robinson lost by an 11-11 tie vote. Delegate C. Lyman Schueler (D., Baltimore) then moved to table the controversial question and the vote carried 13-9.

Supporters of the measure, however, promised it would be petitioned out of committee and another floor fight (the fourth) would be on. Two previous bills aimed at the same objective have ben killed—one of them being twice defeated.

Public Hearings Start Monday on Home Rule

Open hearings on the new Washington home rule and reorganization bill will start Monday at 10 a. m. in the Senate District Committee room in the Capitol.

Those wishing to testify were urged to telephone the committee, NA. 3120, ext. 1365, before noon Saturday.

Two Swedes Go 25,000 Free Miles

A pair of footloose Swedes thumbed into Washington the other day, 14 months and 25,000 miles from home—and they have yet to spend a nickel for carfare.

They did it the hard way, too. From their native Koping, Sweden, Borje Johnsson, 34, and Ake Carlsson, 26, bummed here via Denmark, Germany, France, Spain, Africa, Brazil, Argentina, Mexico—a total of 35 countries.

It was to absorb material for a proposed travel book that they left Koping in December, 1947, but what they've unearthed so far would amaze economists far more than sightseeing fans.

Living on 50c a Day

For Johnsson and Carlsson have been eating and sleeping on a budget of about 50 cents each per day. And they haven't gone hungry or weary—except a few nights in Africa when they had to sit up in trees to keep the wild animals off their backs.

That didn't disrupt their plans, however. Both are scoutmasters and trained for the rigors of the outdoors.

They shoved off from Koping with an initial pool of 500 krona—about $140. For a time, abetted by fees from articles they sold to nine Swedish newspapers the roll grew.

But in Granada, Spain, a local moppet lifted their wallet and they had to start from scratch. There are no Boy Scouts in Granada, Carlsson points out.

Work Way Across Ocean

To keep their fare-free record across the Atlantic, they worked over on a Swedish freighter, Carlsson as an oiler's helper, Johnsson as a messboy. At home, Johnsson is an architect, Carlsson a store clerk.

Wild, woolly beards, which they sprouted in South America came off pronto when they hit the United States. "People here look at beards, but they never stop to pick them up," says Johnsson.

In Washington for a few days of sightseeing, the thrifty wanderers are staying with an old friend, Tule Hult, a mechanical engineer who lives at 2757 Woodley pl. nw.

Their route from here will continue as circuitous as before. New York, San Francisco, Australia, Arabia, Italy, Switzerland, France, England and Koping probably by August of 1950.

And oh, yes, they almost forgot—Minnesota, too, for sure.

Rep. Thomas Has Stomach Operation

By the United Press

Representative Thomas (R., N. J.), former chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee, underwent a major abdominal operation yesterday and his "general condition is good," his office reported.

A secretary said a part of Thomas' stomach and a portion of his small intestine were removed in an operation lasting nearly 2½ hours.

The secretary said that doctors at Walter Reed Hospital, where Thomas has been for nearly a month, believe they have found and removed the cause of the internal bleeding from which Thomas has suffered for the last eight years.

There was no indication how soon the former chief House spy hunter might be well enough to face trial on charges of taking salary "kickbacks" from his former congressional employes.

Helen: Your dinner last night was wonderful!
Jane: Thanks, dear. It was certainly simple -- just fish and ...
Helen: Wine! That Sauterne you served was perfect!
Jane: California Sauterne, Helen. It does wonders for fish!
Helen: I'd like to try it tomorrow night. But -- is it expensive?
Jane: That's the best part. Sauterne wine from California costs so little we can afford to serve it often!

Sixth Branch Of City Bank Opens Today

By S. Oliver Goodman

The City Bank will open its sixth branch office today at 3839 Minnesota ave. ne., President Clarence F. Burton announced yesterday.

The Benning Office, as it will be known, will be under the management of T. Grant Ridgely, formerly head of City Bank's Southeast Office. He will be assisted by a staff of four. J. F. Guthridge will succeed Ridgely as manager of the Southeast Office.

In order to provide ample opportunity for public inspection, the Benning branch will hold open house tonight and Saturday morning.

Boasting more lobby space than any other City Bank branch, the Benning Office is in a fast-growing section. The building is one story, fronts 30 feet on Minnesota ave. and is 100 feet deep. It is air-conditioned and has latest banking fixtures, including cageless tellers' counters.

Also, the institution will open its relocated branch office at 919 Pennsylvania ave. nw. on Monday. The old office at 10th and the Avenue will be closed and its staff and accounts will be moved to the new building.

The relocated Pennsylvania Avenue Office will retain the same staff. Executives include Thomas P. Hickman, vice president; Joseph G. Stephenson, assistant vice president, and Arthur L. Deuterman, assistant cashier. The new building has a carpeted lobby and the bookkeeping department and lunchroom in the basement.

PUC ECHO: The two preferred stocks of Potomac Electric Power Co. slumped yesterday on the Washington Stock Exchange as an aftermath of the Public Utilities Commission's action in refusing to allow the sale of 37 million dollars in bonds to insurance firms. Pepco A and B preferred stocks dropped to $46 bid and $50 asked, compared with the previous day's close of $50 bid and $53 asked. Part of Pepco's financing plan had contemplated the redemption of the two preferred issues at $53.25 a share.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Norbert F. Sherman will leave April 1 for Chicago, where he will become purchasing agent for the Hilton Hotels Corp. Sherman has been associated with the Mayflower Hotel here for 18 years, recently as purchasing agent . . . James Rotto, sales and publicity director of the Hecht Co., today will address the Association of National Advertisers at a convention in Hot Springs, Va. . . . Miss Alice M. Craig, formerly purchasing agent, has been elected secretary and treasurer of Coastal Aviation Corp. of Alexandria, Va. . . . Ambrose J. Seitz has been elevated to executive vice president of Union Pacific Railroad.

STORE SALES: Washington department store sales in the first two months this year showed a 5 per cent increase over the like 1948 period, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond noted yesterday. Store sales in the Fifth Federal Reserve District showed no change in the same period.

ODD LOTS: Rail freight loadings sank to 607,767 cars in week ended March 19, or 14.3 per cent under the previous week and a drop of 13.1 per cent from the same 1948 week. The drop reflected the current coal mine holiday . . . Borrowing against life insurance policies is reported 15 to 40 per cent heavier than last year by six largest firms . . . Earl Dorfman, Hecht Co. display director, has won an automatic washer, dryer and ironer for being among the winners in a Bendix window display contest . . . Auto output this week is estimated at 116,729 units compared with 114,640 in previous week . . . Members of Washington Loan & Trust Club saw a banking movie last night at their dinner meeting and election of officers.

THIRD-TIME WINNER: William A. Bryarly, assistant manager of the Friendship Branch of Riggs National Bank, has won the public speaking contest sponsored by the Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking. He also was the winner in the two previous years. He'll compete in a regional contest scheduled April 30 in Washington. Runners-up in the local competition were William H. Smith and Hugh Darling, both from Riggs.

EARNINGS: Socony - Vacuum Oil Co., Inc., reported 1948 net income at a record $132,800,055, equal to $4.18 a common share, compared with $97,708,927 or $3.13 a share in 1947. Other earnings statements:

Chicago Grain

Chicago, March 24 (AP).—A mixed trend ruled in grains and soybeans while lard fell quite sharply on the Board of Trade today. In all grains May deliveries slumped, while contracts calling for later delivery made modest advances.

May wheat was the weakest contract among the grains. It encountered hedging pressure from the Southwest. In addition, there appeared to be considerable local selling of the May against purchases of deferred contracts. This was also true of other grains.

Wheat closed ¾ lower to ⅞ higher, corn was ½ lower to ¾ higher, oats were ⅛ lower to ⅜ higher, rye was unchanged to ¼ lower, soybeans were unchanged to ¾ lower and lard was 25 to 45 cents a hundred pounds lower.

The drop in lard futures was tied in with a weakening of the price structure for loose lard. It was offered at 11 cents a pound early in the day and then at 10.87½ cents at the close. With the exception of three days during the February price break, this was the lowest level for loose lard since January, 1942.

New York Cotton

New York, March 24 (AP).—Cotton futures moved in a narrow range of 45 cents a bale in dull trading today. Mill buying and covering by local traders imparted a firm tone towards the close with final prices 25 to 35 cents a bale higher.

Traders continued to await congressional action on ECA funds for the next fiscal year. This concerns financing of some 3,500,000 bales of cotton for export in the next crop year beginning August 1, 1949.

Nearby Virginia Area Eligible For Federal Hospital Funds

Three nearby Virginia areas can share in a two-million-dollar Federal appropriation for hospital construction—available to the State on July 1—if they can bear their part of the cost.

Dr. L. J. Roper, State health commissioner, said yesterday he thinks Governor William Tuck may authorize State funds to match the Federal grant.

Under terms of the Hill-Burton Act, the Federal Government assumes 33.33 per cent of the cost of approved hospital building, the State 19.28 per cent, and the local areas the remaining 47.39 per cent.

Hospital needs of nearby Arlington and Fairfax Counties, and the City of Alexandria, were assessed by Virginia in a State-wide survey completed early last year.

At that time, Fairfax needs were estimated at 50 hospital beds, and the county was given an "A" or highest priority in its possible claim to matching aid.

Arlington's bed need was set at 277, and Alexandria's at 327. Both were put under a "B" priority. The area composed by all three was ranked eleventh on the State-wide priority list.

Commissioner Roper yesterday notified heads of all Virginia communities on the "A" or "B" priority lists to assess their hospital needs and their ability to match Federal and State funds.

Officials of all three areas admitted yesterday that no steps have been taken yet to take advantage of the matching funds.

Dr. H. C. Bradford, Fairfax County health officer, said the Board of Supervisors had formed a hospital committee to consider such problems, but had taken no other action.

Arlington County Board Member Daniel A. Dugan said the county has "no money available" to meet its share of the program, but he thought the board should discuss the matter.

"MY FRIENDS AGREE—

—says Mrs. J. Colby, of Chevy Chase, D. C.

"I used to think I had to pay for special values by being pushed and shoved in crowded Washington stores, but by shopping in Shirlington, I find I can work money-miracles and still get home just as fresh and rested as when I left. It's so convenient, too! Why, they have three huge free parking lots where I can park my car. And all the stores, all 48 of them, are concentrated within 3 city blocks, so I can get all my shopping done at one time. What's more, I seldom have to make return trips to exchange anything. That's because the tempo at Shirlington is so much more leisurely. I can take my time and get exactly what I want the first time. Is it any wonder I find shopping at Shirlington a pleasure instead of a chore?"

Belasco Theater

Long before the National Theater sold out to the celluloids, Washington theater lovers talked of bringing the old Belasco back to life. Indeed, there was more than talk. Bids were offered to the Public Buildings Administration for leasing, refurbishing, and operating the building as a theater. It is now owned by the Government and used by the Treasury Department as a combination office building and warehouse.

We have hitherto supported every effort to put the Belasco back in business as the best available method of restoring the living theater to the cultural life of the Capital. Every such effort heretofore has aborted. Governmental obstacles stood in the way and could not be removed, partly because there was no organization to make the sentiments and wants of Washingtonians effectively felt by the Government.

We are, therefore, particularly happy to welcome the birth of a new and apparently sturdy move to get a legitimate theater in Washington. Out of what might have been just another wailing session last Wednesday evening has come a committee of key citizens, of doers, headed by Mr. Melvin Hildreth. Their first objective is the Belasco. Or perhaps more rightly, their first objective is the Congress. Representative Celler has introduced a bill under which the Government would make over the Belasco and lease it for stage productions.

The Belasco is certainly not an ideal solution to Washington's need for a legitimate theater. But it is still the only reasonable target for action, and many obstacles remain to be overcome before its curtain can rise again. The real significance of the new development is perhaps the appearance, almost spontaneously, of a group of citizens with the determination to get something done. Our theatrical desert is disgraceful.

Medical

The Hoover report on Federal Medical Activities is both good and bad. On the plus side, it would bring under one roof most of the important health activities of the Federal Government. Not the least gain in such a merger would be the end of competitive hospital building by the Veterans' Administration and the armed services. With over 40 Federal agencies engaging in some form of medical service, at a total cost of two billion dollars this year, the need to eliminate overlapping and duplication of activities is obvious. The recommendations for bringing some order into this field of Federal service are amply justified.

As much cannot be said, however, for the recommendation that the roof over medical activities be a separate roof. The commission believes health to be so important and complex a matter that it should not be placed in the same Cabinet department with social security and education. Accordingly it proposes a new "United Medical Administration" as an independent agency. The argument is a weak one and could be applied with equal force to the other two functions. No one supposes, as we have remarked before, that Congress will authorize—or that it should authorize—separate departments for health, for education, and for social security and welfare.

These functions are closely related and all have a particularly intimate impact on individual citizens. They belong in a single department of Cabinet rank, as we have repeatedly argued, and as the Hoover Commission originally was prepared to recommend.

Good Riddance

Members of the House redeemed their political courage yesterday by voting to send the Rankin veterans' pension handout back to committee. This forthright move was far preferable to the alternative strategy of riddling the bill with amendments, for even in watered-down form it would have remained an indefensible concession to Mr. Rankin's attempt to buy the veterans. The one-vote margin by which the victory was achieved testifies to the explosive character of the $90-a-month, 110-billion-dollar pension plan. But the fact that 208 legislators were willing to stand and be counted against it also is a refreshing indication that at least some House members were shamed by the pusillanimous refusal to tackle the issue a few days ago. No one, of course, should delude himself that this kills the Rankin bill. Doubtless it will linger to plague Congress in one form or another for years to come. To contain it and similar give-aways totally unrelated to the legitimate needs of veterans will require the same consideration for the general welfare that the House finally mustered yesterday.

Riskless Enterprise

Believers in American free enterprise will rub their eyes when they read what the House Foreign Affairs Committee has proposed to do in extending ECA for 15 months. The committee has approved an amendment that would conflict with the system under which the United States has grown rich and strong. It would go far beyond the existing guarantee that American businessmen, investing in approved recovery projects abroad, can convert the amount of their original investment back into dollars. It would broaden the law to include the convertibility of profits and interest as well as the original investment. The amendment would also guarantee American investors against loss from "(a) seizure, confiscation, and expropriation; (b) destruction by riot, revolution, or war, (c) any law, ordinance, regulation, decree, or administrative action . . . which in the opinion of the administrator prevents the further transaction of the business for which the guaranty was issued."

The Representatives who fell into this trap, under the insistent pushing of the American Bar Association and of certain businessmen and bankers, do not seem to understand what free enterprise means. Free enterprise involves the acceptance of just the kind of risk which the committee now seeks to cover at the potential expense of the American public. Remove these risks, and our private enterprise would become indistinguishable from the newly nationalized enterprises in England. Indeed, outright government investment abroad would be preferable to the kind of sham now sanctioned by the Foreign Affairs Committee. For if government is to assume the financial risks of war, riot, revolution, confiscation and what-not in foreign countries, then government should get the profits of any investments made under such conditions. The necessary guarantees to investors should properly come from those who seek and use the money rather than from the government of the country whose citizens provide it.

It is idle for advocates of this change to pretend that it would not put an appreciable burden on the Government. Suppose the proposed guarantee had been in effect during the twenties, when American private investors lost hundreds of millions in Latin America, or during the thirties in central Europe. Wouldn't our Government have had to foot the bill for a large part of these losses? There are many other objections to the proposed change. One, surely not a coincidence, is that while the House Committee approved a new fund of 272 million dollars for the proposed guarantees, it cut the ECA authorization. Another objection is that the payment of interest and profit to American private investors would add to the dollar drain on European countries, and extend it far beyond the four-year period of ECA, at the very time when the United States is urging these countries to reduce the dollar drain.

Opinions differ as to the amount of private capital that would move into Europe if it were coaxed and wheedled in the manner now proposed. On this point we think Mr. Paul Hoffman is as well qualified to speak as some of the other witnesses before the House committee. "I do not believe," said Mr. Hoffman, "that you can get American investment today in volume in Europe unless you make the kind of guaranty no government should make . . . I think if capital goes to Europe or anywhere else it ought to go at risk." The Senate Foreign Relations Committee wisely rejected the proposal which the House committee has now swallowed hook, line and sinker. We hope and believe that the eventual conference of the two committees on the ECA bill will kill and bury this scheme for an unconscionable raid on the Federal Treasury.

Big Air Force

The House's 385-3 approval of enabling legislation for a 70-group Air Force is testimony to the overwhelming conviction of legislators about the importance of military air power. The enabling legislation, which does nothing more than set a maximum limit, is in line with both presidential and congressional air policy board recommendations of a year ago. It is good to have such authorization on the books.

It does not follow, however, that immediate expansion to the full 70-group limit is either necessary or wise. The criterion of an effective Air Force is not so much planes in being—beyond the immediate needs of a striking force—as it is the capacity to produce new planes rapidly. What is important is to keep production facilities available. A step in this direction would be to divert to the Air Force the 800 million dollars earmarked in the President's budget for universal military training. UMT is for all practical purposes a dead duck. These additional funds if applied to air procurement would go a long way toward keeping a healthy aircraft industry alive. They would do this, moreover, without exceeding the President's budgetary ceiling of 15 billion dollars for defense. There is especially compelling reason to stay within this limit because of the additional burden to be incurred in sending arms to western Europe.

The danger is that Congressional Appropriations Committees may fall victim to the intense pressures intended to convince them that air power is all that matters. These pressures have come largely from sources outside the Air Force proper. An example is William Bradford Huie's article in the April Reader's Digest. Mr. Huie recites the struggle to obtain recognition of the potentialities of air power and seeks to prove thereby that anyone who now doubts the capability of air power to win a war by itself is a mossback. This, in our opinion, is specious reasoning, and it shows up particularly in Mr. Huie's criticism of those who believe in the importance of a healthy economy and a "balanced" force.

The nature of a balanced force is not equitable division of funds. It is, rather, an effort to make sure that the country's defense system can do what is expected of it—that air power can be supplemented with supply, bases, invasion and occupation troops if they should prove necessary. Gen. Omar N. Bradley has expounded what in our opinion is the soundest view of air power as a primary but not exclusive weapon. Indeed, in the face of the pressure to regard air power as a panacea, the National Security Council ought to be considering just what kind of war the country should be preparing to fight, whether the sole aim should be the ability to drop bombs on enemy cities.

Demand For Steel

Demands for mandatory allocation of steel and for Government-financed additions to steel capacity are not likely to meet with much favor at the hands of Congress in view of the accumulating evidence that steel supply is rapidly overtaking demand for steel. Steel is the bellwether of our economic situation, and the bellwether of steel is the price of scrap. As Herbert G. Moulton pointed out in an article published in The Washington Post last Sunday, the steel scrap market is "very sensitive and in its price variations it measures changes in the degree of pressure of consumption on production in the steel industry just as the barometer, by recording variations in air pressure, forecasts subsequent changes in the weather." Hence current non-seasonal declines in steel scrap prices are regarded by experts as a forecast of later reduction in steel and, therefore, other lines of business activity.

Indisputable evidence of a relaxation of buying pressure has also been afforded by the Department of Commerce announcement that steel allocations under the present voluntary system are to be cut, reductions being particularly heavy in allotments to freight car builders, and the armed forces. These cuts are being made because orders for steel have not been large enough to absorb allocated supplies. Part of the released steel will be allocated to other essential users, and the remainder will go into the open market. While steel shortages still exist, this over-all reduction in allocations indicates that the time is not far distant when steel supply will catch up with demand. Indeed, Mr. Moulton warns that "within the next few years, or even sooner, the [steel] capacity may be surplus rather than short of requirements."

Credit for narrowing the gap between steel output and steel demand is due to the steel industry. For, judged by any reasonable standard of accomplishment, the expansion of production has been extraordinary. Last year, for instance, the (estimated) production of steel ingots amounted to 88,500,000 tons, compared with 79,700,000 tons in 1945, and approximately 67 million tons in 1940. This year production is expected to be well above 90 million tons, possibly reaching the 95-million-ton level, given exceptionally favorable conditions.

With production at such high levels, it would be foolhardy for the Government to finance an expansion program that could not be completed for several years. By that time the extraordinary demands of the postwar period will have been satisfied and, barring the possibility of another war, the new Government-financed steel plants might be superfluous. Moreover, it has been repeatedly pointed out that the construction of steel plants entails heavy drains on supplies of finished steel—drains that would create or intensify shortages of steel needed by steel-consuming industries.

Insofar as the steel industry is concerned, therefore, we conclude that a congressional inquiry is not now necessary to determine whether additional steel mills are needed. The facts speak for themselves.

Boyd Confirmation

At the risk of a prolongation of the coal strike the Senate, by a 50 to 11 vote, confirmed the nomination of Dr. James Boyd as director of the Bureau of Mines. The size of the affirmative vote was doubtless greater than it would have been if Mr. Lewis had not decreed a work stoppage ostensibly for the purpose of blocking confirmation. To that extent he may be said to have influenced the action of the Senate; fortunately, to his own discomfiture. To the public at large the promptitude and vigor with which the Senate responded to this insolent challenge is heartening assurance that it does not intend to submit to dictation from labor leaders or other arrogant individuals, however great their mischief-making capacity. Thus the strike ends happily for all concerned except the miners who will return to work next Monday, on orders from Mr. Lewis, to find Dr. Boyd securely intrenched in office.

METROPOLITAN SONNET

Hammer and steel, the symbols of this hour,
Are worshiped instruments of clanging song,
And climax and crescendo and the long
Impelling timpanis resound with power.
Lost is the delicate lyric of a flower
And lost are melodies to which belong
Unhurried codas hidden from the throng,
Cadenzas of an ungregarious bower.

O age, too raucous with the dissonance
Of crowded commerce, stridulous and loud,
Take succor once again and sustenance
From singers, drifting lonely with a cloud,
Watching frenetic leaves of autumn turn,
And hearing music in an ancient urn.

Sustaining Demand

Mr. Leon Keyserling's position in his communication appearing in your March 22 issue is based largely on his major premise: "If we are reasonably successful with general policies to maintain maximum employment and production throughout the economy." That is a very big "if." Nothing that he has outlined thus far gives us confidence that the Administration can or will be successful in achieving this much-desired goal.

Since 1946 the economy has been straining to make up the shortages created during the war. As these shortages are met the problem of sustaining demand at present high levels becomes increasingly serious. Consumer income is at the highest rate in our Nation's history and yet various industries and many branches of agriculture are already developing unmanageable surpluses.

Mere elimination of profits in these fields, as Mr. Keyserling suggests, is not enough to enable them to keep up high-level production. If there are other more effective remedies, now is the critical period when they should be brought into play in those areas where excess supplies and unemployment are beginning to appear. ECONOMIST.

Red Rider

Is not Mrs. Doyle who has just tendered her resignation from the District of Columbia Board of Education the same Mrs. Doyle who, as the president of that board some 13 years ago, advocated the repeal of what was then termed the "Red rider" amendment of the 1935 District Appropriation Act which provided that "No part of any appropriation . . . shall be available for . . . salary of any person teaching or advocating communism?"

This advocacy on her part came when already the corporation counsel of the District, Mr. E. Barrett Prettyman, in response to an inquiry from the board, had ruled that the amendment in question would be applicable only to the teachers who advocated communism in the schools of the District.

In the light of this ruling which held that the Red rider amendment's condemnation was directed only against advocating communism in the District schools, I inquire was it to the best interest of the pupils and of good government that the amendment should be repealed as advocated by Mrs. Doyle?

ROSCOE F. WALTER.

Rockville, Md.

Editor's Note: It is true that Mrs. Doyle advocated the repeal of the Red rider. Despite Mr. Prettyman's opinion defining the applicability of the law in September, 1935, Comptroller General J. R. McCarl ruled in November, 1935, that teachers were required to swear once a month that they had not taught communism before they could receive their checks. The meaning of the word "teach" was never fully clarified and the rider had the effect of preventing any discussion of the Soviet Union in the schools.

In 1937, when the Red rider was repealed, a proviso was passed stating that nothing herein shall be construed as permitting the advocacy of communism."

Britain Behind Times

I am British and traditionally proud of it. But I also think we have been cock of the walk so long we have got into the habit of thinking we have nothing to learn from any other country.

In a recent American food parcel, I saw a packet of rich chocolate cake mixture needing only the addition of water. Even before the war our cake mixtures needed butter, eggs, sugar and milk, which makes it appear that the mixture was only flour and flavoring.

I once asked a Belgian visitor what she thought of us and she replied, "You are so wasteful. Just look at all those trees up that road. Not a forest, for timber, just trees. And you are short of food. In my country that ground would be cultivated."

Compare the cleanliness of Holland and Switzerland with our own beloved but grubby towns and streets. How long must we suffer unwrapped bread; bacon, cheese and butter exposed to flies and shop cats, and dogs allowed in shops to stuff their noses into sacks of vegetables, lentils or whatever they fancy. Tinned food today has reached a very high standard of hygiene but in this country the variety, and in some cases the quality, is very poor.

Now is the time for Britishers with brains and enterprise to learn whatever is good from other countries, then come back here and use that knowledge for the common good.

Purifying The Pact

I respectfully suggest that the following two sections be included in the proposed Atlantic Pact before ratification by the United States Senate:

1. Any member nation shall be automatically expelled from membership in the Atlantic Pact when that nation embarks upon a course of aggression or disobeys a lawful order of the United Nations Security Council on maintenance of peace.

2. No member nation may contract any secret alliance or agreement to furnish military equipment to any other nation and any such secret alliance or agreement now in effect shall be terminated within 90 days after ratification of the Atlantic Pact.

The first is designed to prevent the occurrence of unfortunate incidents such as the Dutch action in Indonesia, in defiance of the United Nations. It might also serve to keep the peace in the Near East, where war between England and Israel is not an impossibility. The second would prevent United States military equipment from being frittered away for purposes not intended under the pact.

Adoption of these two provisions would protect the interest of the United States against any nation that might subvert the ideals of the pact to its own purposes, would greatly strengthen the powers of the United Nations against defiance, would firmly establish the defense purposes of the pact, and would reassure anyone who might fear concealed aggressive intentions.

"Pauperized Washington"

Throughout the first three paragraphs of your March 16 editorial is the implication that defeat of the District sales tax bill inevitably means starvation of essential municipal services, and that the particular bill rejected is the only alternative for raising needed municipal revenue—an implication contradicted by the last three paragraphs of the editorial!

Despite The Post's past support for other means of raising revenue, such as by a broadened and increased income tax and by an increased Federal contribution, there also seems to be in the March 16 editorial the implicit assumption that this Congress will not enact other measures to raise needed funds on the ground that past Congresses, particularly the Eightieth Congress, did not do so.

Such an assumption seems to ignore the fact that the composition of the Eighty-first Congress is considerably different from the composition of the preceding one; such an attitude also appears to take it for granted that a majority of our Congressmen are not open to persuasion with regard to such reasonable proposals as a broadened District income tax: some increase in the Federal contribution; and authorization for the District to borrow for capital improvements. I personally believe that a majority can be persuaded to support such reasonable proposals if they are adequately explained and if such measures can be brought to a vote.

I appreciate that the House, during the debate on March 14 by a division of 100 to 50 rejected Mr. Klein's amendment which in effect would have substituted a broadened and increased income tax for the sales tax. But only about 1/3 of the members of the House were present and voted. Also, the rejection of the sales tax confronts those who desire adequate municipal services with the necessity of finding some alternative.

I wish particularly to call attention to some considerations relating to a "broadened" District income tax—i. e., one which would include essentially all those residing here, even though they technically may have domiciles elsewhere, with appropriate credits for income taxes paid to other States, as proposed in the bill rejected on March 14 and in the Klein bill (HR-1385). (The Klein bill would also increase the rates.)

Professional students of taxation and tax administrators generally agree that the sales tax is one of the most unjust taxes in existence, in that it is highly "regressive"—i. e., it follows the rule: the lower the income, the higher the percentage of the income taken in taxes.

It is high time that voluntary taxpayers had some help from those people who have not yet decided to be voluntary taxpayers, many of whom I am convinced would be perfectly willing to pay a District income tax if they felt that it was being collected from all those similarly situated.

The income tax, of course, is not the only possible measure for relieving the District's financial plight. Other alternatives which could be used in combination would be some increase in the Federal contribution, authorization of the District to borrow for capital improvements, and perhaps some increase in property and liquor taxes, as pointed out ably by Representative Kennedy and others in the House debate on March 14. Incidentally, the House debate and the newspaper comments that I have seen did not, if I recall correctly, make mention of a tax on hotel rooms as a means of taxing expenditures in the District by transients, which has been one of the arguments used in favor of the sales tax. Rent Dilemma

IT IS like seeing an old newsreel played over again. History does repeat itself and in a strikingly exact sort of way.

Unless the new rent control bill is drastically rewritten in conference between the two houses, whirh at this moment seems unlikely, President Truman is going to be faced with a tough decision. The question—to veto or not to veto—is like the one he faced when Congress passed and sent to the White House in 1946 a bill cutting the heart out of OPA.

The President vetoed the first bill renewing OPA in such an enfeebled fashion that, as he said in his veto message, it was worse than nothing. The second he signed when his leaders in the Senate and House told him he could get nothing better and it was sign or let OPA die.

That, it will be recalled, was when the enemies of OPA were insisting that decontrol would inevitably mean lower prices. For 18 days, before the second emasculated measure became law, there were no controls. They were never effectively restored and the cost of living began to soar upward.

A lot of the same kind of double talk has come out in connection with rent control. The President's chief advisers are supplying him with facts which they believe show (1) that the net effect of Senate and House decontrol amendments is to shatter rent control and (2) that the shattering of rent control will further throw the Nation's economy out of balance.

UNDER the various concessions made to landlords, many of them justified in a great number of instances, rents have been slowly creeping upward during the past year. Rents were at an all-time peak for the most recent month—January—for which figures are available.

The index on rent for January of this year was four points higher than in January of 1948. From November to December of last year the index jumped almost a point. This, mind you, was under present rent control.

The analysis reaching the President's desk shows that this rise has tended to wipe out the slight drop in the cost of food that occurred since the all-time peak in the cost of living last August. Rent is 15 to 20 per cent of the budget of the average householder.

The net decline in the cost of living since the peak has been only 2 per cent. It is still 73 per cent above the prewar base.

It requires no genius in economics and statistics to see what will happen if rent control is shattered or abolished. Estimates are that it would advance from 5 to 9 per cent a month over a period of several months to a year. This would mean an advance in the cost of living index of 1 to 1½ per cent a month.

AGAIN, neither a genius nor a crystal-gazer is necessary to forecast what would happen under such an advance. It would touch off new wage demands which could very well start the inflationary spiral upward. This would come at a time when a number of low-income families have already been priced out of the market. In short, it would encourage the kind of inflation-deflation that invites depression.

The gimmick the White House advisers are most fearful of is the amendment tacked on in the House, of which Representative Paul Brown of Georgia was author. That has an innocent-enough sound, assuring the landlord a reasonable return on a reasonable investment.

In actual practice the Brown amendment would create an almost hopeless administrative tangle. The big landlords with large resources of wealth would be able to stop any tenant protests in the courts. The little landlord, not having such resources and in many cases really needing relief, would not get it.

Faced with the March 31 deadline, when rent controls expire, the Administration has shown extraordinarily bad timing. Bringing up the civil-rights issue at the start of the session precipitated the Southern filibuster. That was ready-made for the persistent, powerful, tireless real estate lobby.

Millions of families are watching anxiously to see what Congress does about rent control. They may not understand the talk about States decontrolling or cities decontrolling. But they will certainly understand when the landlord hikes the rent 10 per cent or 25 per cent. They will know that postwar history is repeating itself in a peculiarly grim and unpleasant fashion.

Uninformed Cab Drivers

The Dupont Circle underpass has admittedly created a number of traffic problems. These have received full coverage in the Washington press.

I have the misfortune to live in the affected area on N st., which has been one way for more than a year.

Every night I take a cab home. In eight out of ten cases, the cab driver goes blithely up to 22d st. and dumps me a half block from my residence. He usually says "When did they change N st. to a one-way street?"

It seems that in such cases, taxicab drivers, both independent owners and companies, have a duty and responsibility to inform themselves of changes in the traffic pattern in order to accommodate their fares most expeditiously. RIDER.

A Communication

U. S. Imports In European Recovery

By Maurice Feldman

Economic consultant and former financial editor of Der Wiener Tag, Vienna.

THE CRY of some New England canneries for higher tariffs and of some of the officials of the watchmakers' union for a restriction of the Swiss import quotas shows that some of us still have not learned from experiences of the past decades. These gentlemen overlook the fact that—in the long run—we can only export if we enable the buyers of our goods to pay for them.

Since the end of World War II we have financed a great deal of our exports ourselves, yet in spite of our financial aid our customers are not able to continue with the same amount of imports from the United States because we are not buying enough from them. The only way for Europe, Latin America, Africa and Asia to balance their payments is through exports to the United States and the tourist traffic from the United States.

It is the belief of the writer that business and labor should not only support the present foreign trade policy of President Truman, but insist on further immediate and considerable tariff reductions. If business and labor fail to encourage higher imports from abroad we will witness a serious decline in our own exports. Moreover, we will be responsible for not having prevented a situation similar to that which existed after World War I.

AFTER 1918 and the years to come the heads of our banks and industrial corporations failed to recognize the basic changes which occurred—namely, that the United States had become the world's number one creditor nation. Instead of giving our debtors a chance to repay their debts through goods, Congress, at the request of industry, increased tariffs to such an extent that the United States surrounded itself with a Chinese wall. That short-sighted policy was to some extent responsible for the catastrophe which occurred throughout the world in the years between 1929 and 1933.

It is a pity that not all members of Congress are aware of the critical outlook for our foreign trade. Otherwise, how could they have passed a law which provides that 50 per cent of the freight within the Marshall Plan transactions be handled by our own merchant marine? Furthermore, our customs officials have not up to this time received any orientation as to the importance of facilitating imports from abroad. Today we have as much red tape as ever when it comes to imported merchandise.

HOW SERIOUS the present situation of our foreign trade is can be seen from statistics. Between 1936 and 1940 our exports averaged 3.2 billion dollars and our imports 2.5 billion dollars. In 1946 our exports rose to 10.2 billions; in 1947 to 15.3 billions; in 1948, in spite of the Marshall Plan and the credits of the Export-Import Bank, exports declined to 12 billion dollars. Imports increased from 4.9 billion dollars in 1946 to 5.7 billion dollars in 1947 and to seven billion dollars in 1948. A study of our export and import figures from 1940 on shows that the increase of our exports did not keep in step with those of the imports.

The crux of the whole problem is to provide our buyers from abroad with the necessary dollars. Even a country like Great Britain would be bankrupt without the Marshall aid in 1949. Today, even Great Britain—in spite of our aid—has a dollar deficit of about one billion in a year.

There is only one alternative left to Great Britain and to all countries, which still believe in free trade and free enterprise—to increase their exports to the United States. There is no doubt that our population with the highest living standards on earth, could easily absorb a considerable increase of imported merchandise.

BEFORE World War II only 3 per cent of our national income was used for imports, while the British figure was 25 per cent. In 1948 our import figures in relation to the national income were 2.98 per cent. The writer believes that we could easily raise our imports to 10 per cent of our national income without any hardship whatsoever for the expansion of our own industry, agriculture and trade.

More imports mean a wider variety of goods for the masses of our consumers. Besides, they result in more employment for tens of thousands of workers and clerks employed by importers, banks, shipping and forwarding agencies, assembling plants, jobbers, retailers, advertisers, etc.

In many respects imports have a very healthy effect on the price structure and can benefit consumers. One of the best examples is the development of prices for sardines and other canned goods. Because of increased imports our own canneries were forced to come down with their prices, which were abnormally high during the past years. In some instances, imports also forced domestic production to keep a high standard of quality.

OF COURSE stimulation of imports cannot be a one-sided affair. All we can do is to lower our tariffs, to break down trade barriers, to establish international trade fairs in our principal cities. In this respect the office of International Trade and the International Fairs Section of the Department of Commerce are doing a marvelous job and laying the groundwork for more and better trade.

On the other hand, foreign governments as well as private businessmen and our importers, bankers, forwarding agencies—in one word, all the businessmen interested in imports—should take the initiative in promoting imported merchandise. First of all, they should educate the foreign suppliers that they could not expect large turnovers of their goods on our market if they keep the present high prices.

If we repeat the mistakes of the years between 1920 and 1929, we can be sure that the next years will be full of economic eruptions. Today our economy is related to all the economies of the other free democratic nations.

Fortunately, the policies of our present Administration, which have the full support of such outstanding Republican leaders as Senator Vandenberg and John Foster Dulles, indicate that we are not willing to let the world slide into chaos. No sincere public official or economist has any illusions as to what the result of an economic crisis similar to that of 1929-1933 would be today.

From every viewpoint we should be greatly interested in keeping and improving the world's present economy, not only through loans and outright gifts, but primarily by productive measures. One of these lies in considerable increase of our imports from abroad.

The Man Who Came to Dinner . . .

Barkley Urges Union in Fight On Intolerance

Vice President Barkley challenged the American people last night to form a united front against intolerance and bigotry "so that wars may cease and men may live in freedom."

He told a meeting of the National Conference of Christians and Jews that it is America's "moral obligation to salvage civilization from the clutches of those who would destroy our right of freedom of worship and our right to pursue legitimate enterprises."

He said this Nation's position as the world's leader "economically and politically" makes it the duty of every man "not merely to give lip service to tolerance and understanding, but also to live it."

The dinner meeting, presided over by Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, was the climax of "Brotherhood Week," sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews. About 300 persons were present for the meeting in the Hotel Mayflower.

Clendenin J. Ryan, New York businessman and national chairman of the confeernce's finance committee, lashed out at conditions upon which communism is thriving in the world.

He listed them as: "Bigotry, hate, suspicion, jealousy, gangsterism and discrimination."

Trumans Fete Churchills

photographers that he was on the way.

Mr. Churchill put up his fingers in the famous V-for-Victory sign, and otherwise obliged the men with the cameras.

He told the reporters, however, that he was saying nothing at this time—at least, nothing in public. One of them recalled his Iron Curtain speech at Fulton, Mo., just three years ago, when he warned of Russian expansion and told of his apprehensions about the "haggard world." Did the world look better to him now?

He looked as if he thought it did. Removing his cigar, however, he smiled and said:

"I haven't got anything to say publicly. Thank you for coming to meet me. It's a great compliment."

The black-tie dinner given last night at Blair House, home of the First Family while the White House is being repaired, was a small one.

Those who gathered at the table, besides the President and Mrs. Truman and the Churchills, were Miss Margaret Truman, Capt. Christopher Soames, son-in-law of the Churchills; Vice President Alben W. Barkley, the Chief Justice and Mrs. Fred M. Vinson, the British Ambassador and Lady Franks, Secretary of State Dean Acheson and Mrs. Acheson, General of the Army George C. Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. Max O'Rell Truitt, son-in-law and daughter of Vice President Barkley, and White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross and Mrs. Ross.

The Chief Executive and the First Lady sat across the table from each other. Mr. Truman had Mrs. Churchill on his right and Mrs. Vinson on the left, while Mrs. Truman was flanked by Mr. Churchill and Vice President Barkley.

In the coffee and cigar period, when the ladies withdrew, the President and Mr. Churchill had a talk, but it was a brief one. Mr. Churchill also talked over World War II days with General Marshall. Like Mr. Truman, he is a strong admirer of the former Army Chief of Staff and Secretary of State, and was reported to have said several years ago that he might turn out to be "the noblest Roman of us all."

Mr. Churchill, whose mother was an American and who says he never feels "entirely a foreigner" over here, crossed the Atlantic this time to make a speech at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology on March 31. His subject will be "The Twentieth Century: Its Promise and Realization."

On his way down from New York yesterday, the famous statesman-author-painter-bricklayer and Mrs. Churchill were accompanied by Capt. Soames, Miss N. E. Sturdee, a secretary; George Williams, a Scotland Yard man, and a valet. Captain Soames' wife, the Churchills' "Sergeant Mary," remained in New York.

Secret Service men had been detailed to guard Mr. Churchill on the way down, and more were at Union Station when the train came in. Maj. Robert J. Barrett and a detail of detectives and bluecoats also were on hand.

President Truman sent his Army aide, Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, to the station to meet the former Prime Minister. Gen. Vaughan and Stanley Woodward, protocol officer of the State Department, constituted the official welcoming committee.

Ambassador Franks and Lady Franks were at the station, and also a number of members of the British colony in Washington. The British girls, some of them in uniform, gave out with ecstatic cries when Churchill was getting into the Ambassador's Rolls-Royce.

The distinguished visitor, who seems to be blessed with amazing health and vitality, was attired in a black coat, striped trousers, a bow tie and black homburg. He carried a walking stick in one hand and gray gloves in the other.

If there had been any decided change in Mr. Churchill, it was in his once reddish hair. It is now whiter and there is less of it.

Mrs. Churchill wore a black crepe dress with two strands of pearls, and over that a coat of deep purple.

Arriving at the British Embassy, Mr. Churchill saw a crowd of between 200 and 300 gathered in the grounds. They were mostly members of the embassy staff and their wives and children. He got out of the limousine on Massachusetts ave., and walked up the driveway amid cheers.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

The Jitters

THE CLASSIC description of meaningless maneuvering is given in the ancient quatrain: "The good old Duke of York; he had 10,000 men. He marched them up the hill; then marched them down again." It is pretty important to realize that the Kremlin's current moves probably have very little more practical meaning than the doings of the mutton-headed duke, despite the jitters they are causing everywhere.

At the moment, for instance, those who want an excuse for opposing the Atlantic Pact are saying that the inclusion of Norway was "needlessly provocative." This directly results, of course, from a carefully calculated campaign of threats to keep Norway out of the Atlantic Pact which was launched months ago.

At that time the Soviet Ambassador at Stockholm, Chernychev, began to work on the Swedes. Finland, he roared, would be invaded if Norway joined the pact. Perhaps, he muttered, Norway would be invaded, too. The Swedes, who wanted to preserve Scandinavian isolation in any case, were easily convinced. They in turn persuaded the more nervous European foreign offices. Eventually, the story showed up here. It was given added color by a series of shrewdly planned episodes, such as the Soviet note to Norway.

FINALLY, this particular engagement in the war of nerves reached its climax about a fortnight ago. Pravda roared a few decibels more loudly against the "uncooperative" Finns. The Soviet Ambassador at Helsinki, General Savonenkov, behaved with a rudeness that was unusual even for him. The arrival of the 1928 class of Red army recruits and the departure of the class of 1925 was made the occasion for much marching and countermarching along the Finnish and Norwegian borders. The same number of Russian soldiers—about 250,000—has been stationed in this area since the end of the war. But now there was talk of "reinforcements," and of "divisions massing on the frontier."

These developments accidentally coincided with a period of temporary political difficulty for the independent, Communist-free government of Social Democratic Premier Fagerholm. The word instantly went out that there was to be "another Czech coup." Or it was said that the Finnish Communists—a relatively small minority—would rise against the government with arms supplied from the Soviet base at Hangoe.

The truth is, of course, that all three conditions for a "Czech coup"—Communist infiltration of the government, control of the police and neutralization of the army—are lacking in Finland. The Finnish government, while determined to discharge its heavy obligations to Russia, is equally determined to maintain Finnish local independence.

A skeleton Finnish underground already exists, ready to go into action if Soviet aggression should occur. Since the nature of the terrain is ideal, the underground is well supplied, and the Finns are almost insanely brave, this underground constitutes a real threat. Worse still, if Finland is invaded, Sweden undoubtedly will climb down off the fence and join the Atlantic Pact.

IF THESE deterrents did not exist, no one can doubt that the Soviets would invade Finland tomorrow. But the important facts are that the deterrents do exist; and for the present at least, they are proving sufficient. And thus the center of jitters has now shifted from Helsinki to Belgrade.

The Kremlin's pressure campaign against the Yugoslav heretics must be taken much more seriously than the threat to Finland. But here again, the conditions for a coup on the Czech pattern simply do not exist.

The obviously planted rumors, such as the story that four Yugoslav generals were going to liquidate Marshal Tito last weekend, do not deserve serious consideration. Tito's 400,000 men are the only real force in the Balkans, capable of making mincemeat of the Romanian and Bulgarian units moving aimlessly about on the frontiers. And the Yugoslav secret police have shown every evidence of being able to cope with the "guerillas" that are being infiltrated in small numbers into Yugoslav Macedonia.

It is always possible, to be sure, that Tito will fall victim to a Kremlin-hired assassin. This is a danger that cannot be ignored. Equally, however, the Kremlin cannot ignore the danger that the Yugoslavs will make serious trouble in chaotic Albania, where a Russian submarine and air base is being built up.

Moreover, it does not matter whether the issue confronting us is including Norway in the Atlantic Pact today, or offering financial support to Marshal Tito tomorrow. It is always wrong to use the arguments of the appeasers of the 1930s, that this quite reasonable move must not be made, that another entirely legal step must not be taken, because they may give offense. If offense is to be taken so easily, surely it is better to have the matter out at once.

Sets Up New Pact on Rules

Charlottesville, Va., March 24 (Spl.).—The University of Virginia Student Council today announced it had completed a revised constitution, giving that body broad powers to make and enforce student rules.

Its announcement followed a stir created recently when Dean of Students J. H. Newman, compained in a report of heavy student drinking and of women being entertained in dormitory rooms.

His report, made to University President Colgate W. Darden, jr., was for the year ending in June, 1948. Students called the morals phase of it "exaggerated."

The revised constitution, unanimously approved by the student council, will be voted on by the entire student body April 6 and 7. At least 60 per cent of the roughly 5000 university students must cast ballots.

Under the revised constitution, the council would have "power to make and issue regulations for governing student conduct and activities," not including Virginia's traditional honors system, and authority "to try and to punish all acts of student conduct that reflect discredit upon the university."

Schacht Urges Return To Gold Standard

Rome, March 24 (AP).—Rome's conservative Giornale D'Italia devoted its front page today to an interview with Hjalmar Schacht, which it described as his plan for the "solution of the world crisis."

Schacht said a return to the gold standard "would be the surest base for reconstruction of international trade."

Baldness Cures Futile

Chicago, March 24 (AP).—Bald and balding men are wasting millions of dollars annually on "futile" hair-saving and dandruff-curing treatments, the American Medical Association said tonight.

The association's committee on cosmetics reported that few, if any, of the treatments do any good.

"Neither massage, mechanical devices, tonics, ultra-violet light, hormones, vitamins, nor any other treatment will regenerate hair lost in ordinary baldness of older men or in premature baldness of young men," the committee said.

Antipoll Tax Cloture Has 35 GOP Backers

NYNT News Service

Republican leaders have secretly rounded up pledges to guarantee that at least 35 Republican Senators will support a cloture petition to bring the antipoll tax bill to the floor for action, it was learned yesterday.

This move was taken as the opening step in a new Republican strategy aimed to prove their contention that civil rights legislation can be enacted under the compromise cloture rule driven through the Senate last week by a Republican-Southern Democratic coalition.

Pyramid Defendant Attacks Indictment

Daniel A. Thomas, indicted as the founder of a pyramid club in Washington, yesterday charged through counsel that his papers and money were "illegally detained" after his arrest.

He asked in a motion in District Court that his indictment be dismissed or a better bill of particulars be presented, since evidence submitted to the grand jury was "illegal, incompetent and insufficient to establish that a criminal offense has been committed."

The motion says that an envelope containing $8 and another with $17 were taken from Thomas, along with papers in his pocket, and have been illegally destined since then by the United States Attorney.

Thomas' attorney, George J. Boden, filed an affidavit saying he examined police records to discover that Thomas was charged with "investigation" on March 12 at 9:30 p. m. The record showed he was released at 12:20 a. m., March 13.

Consequently, the motion asserted, Thomas' indictment provided insufficient evidence and "failed to state with clearness and necessary certainty the time, place and circumstances to sufficiently apprise the defendant of the crime with which he stands charged."

Thomas, 28, is a bricklayer who lives at 81 Hawaii ave. nw. He was indicted Monday and is due to be arraigned today.

He was charged with promoting a lottery, "referred to and called a pyramid club"—a scheme for easy money that has taken the Nation and the Capital by storm in the past few weeks.

River Program Is Approved

Proposed joint action by four nearby Virginia communities to abate pollution in the Potomac River was indorsed last night by the Northern Virginia Regional Planning Commission.

In approving a report from its Water Supply and Sanitation Committee, which recommended the joint program, the commission offered its services as an agency to investigate costs of a survey and pave the way for the regional sewage program.

The commission, which met last night at Fairfax Courthouse, acts as an advisory body on planning problems of mutual interest to the cities of Alexandria and Falls Church, and Arlington, Fairfax and Prince William Counties.

Prince William County, however, would not participate in the proposed pollution control program.

The report urging joint action was submitted by Weldon T. Ellis, jr., an Arlington representative to the commission, who heads its sanitation committee.

Ray Hazard Found Above Earth's Air

Detection of potentially dangerous X-rays and extreme ultraviolet radiation 40 to 100 miles above the earth by physicists of the Naval Research Laboratory was disclosed last night.

The rays, apparently emanating from the sun, would be dangerous to mankind were they able to penetrate the earth's protecting atmosphere, Navy spokesmen said.

By the same token, [illegible] the officials were silent on the point, such radiations would also be an added hazard to man in space ship travels of the future.

The first experiments that detected the X-rays were conducted by T. R. Burnight, NRL scientist, in a rocket flight last August 15 at the White Sands Proving Ground, Las Cruces, N. Mex. Photographic films protected by beryllium and aluminum metal foils were recovered blackened by the X-rays.

LAKE JACKSON

Washington's only fresh-water lake—situated in virgin forest in the foothills of the Blue Ridge—31 miles from the Capitol. It is a sensibly restricted lodge colony. It is free from mosquitoes and nettles. The healthful, bracing air and the quiet restfulness of its 500 wooded acres make Lake Jackson the perfect place to get away from the hot, crowded city. Excellent swimming, fishing and boating for property owners only. Incomparably enchanting and desirable. Established 21 years.

Lodge sites are from $300 up. Lodge built to your specifications. Lodges from $3,500 up. Terms.

The Federal Diary

Bureau of Census Faces Prospects of Moving Some Offices From Area

The Census Bureau is faced with moving some of its operations out of the Washington area. The reason—lack of office space here.

With the 1950 general census to be taken, the agency had planned to increase its staff at nearby Suitland, Md., from 2500 to 13,500. But first, it had to have a building there in which to put the additional 9000 people.

W. E. Reynolds, the Public Buildings commissioner, urged the Senate Appropriations Committee to approve $11,500,000 to build the structure. He said there was no place here which could handle Census' increased activities. The official said it would be economy to have the building at Suitland; that it would pay for itself in rent saved in a few years. In addition, he testified:

"To move these Census operations out of Washington would cost between eight million and ten million dollars."

The committee rejected the request. Now Census and PBA officials are trying to figure out the next step—if they should try to find office space in another city, or if they should take their case to the House. Since the House hasn't acted on the request, it's a good bet the project will be taken there in the hope that the Senate committee will reverse itself.

Reynolds, incidentally, believes that some Federal workers here should be moved to other cities. He told the Senate committee that Federal employment here was increasing at a rate of 1000 a month and there simply was no available office space here for them. He then added:

"I am hopeful that we can catch up by moving some people out of Washington. I think they are getting too highly concentrated here."

COMMERCE'S Export Control must be put through the wringer. Plans were being rushed yesterday for the immediate firing of upward of 150 of the agency's 750 people here. Officials said there was no way in which a major lay-off could be escaped. Money isn't available to pay the salaries of the present staff.

Actually, only a comparatively small amount of money is involved. The House Export Control's budget by $175,000. Agency officials asked the Senate to restore $115,000 of the slash. The Senate Appropriations Committee refused.

Since this is near the end of the fiscal year and since employes who are laid off must be paid terminal leave, a disproportionate number of people will have to be axed to absorb the reduction in funds.

STORY: It happened during yesterday's hectic debate in the House on the Rankin veterans' pension bill. A Republican leader, who was asked how he'd vote on the bill, gave this answer:

"On this bill," he said seriously, "I'm going to rise above principle—I'm going to vote politics."

At Postoffice, Herbert Chamberlain and James Bell are slated to be appointed superintendents of the Stamp Division. They will divide up the job formerly held by Robert E. Fellers, who was promoted to deputy third assistant . . . Senator Russell Long (D., La.) is in line to be appointed chairman of the pay-raise subcommittee of the Senate Civil Strvice Committee . . . W. Manly Sheppard, former chief clerk of the House Labor Committee, has opened his own business consultant office here . . . William V. Crosswhite, a former Justice Department attorney, has been appointed to Internal Revenue's Excess Profits Tax Council.

Edward C. Sweeney has been appointed to the professional staff of the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee . . . The committee won't act before April 6 on the nominations of Cornelius V. Whitney and Thomas Blaisdell to be Undersecretary and Assistant Secretary respectively of the Commerce Department . . . James A. Tawney of the House Ways and Means professional staff has resigned to open a law office here . . . Applicants have until April 4 to file for the medical officer exam of the Public Health Service. Apply at PHS, Division of Commissioned Officers.

OHE: There are fresh rumors of a lay-off at the Offie of the Housing Expediter. The new rent bill is certain to transfer some of the Federal controls to local areas. What effect this will have on OHE's workload is anyone's guess at this time. But this definitely isn't speculation—that the rent control opponents now plan to further hamstring OHE by knocking down its budget.

Justice Dept. Attorney's Son Charged With Holdup

High School Senior Admits Area Jobs To Get Motorcycle Money, Police Say

An 18-year-old senior at Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School, son of a tax attorney at the Department of Justice, yesterday was charged with holding up a Washington ice cream store March 22.

The boy, Leland Thomas Atherton, jr., 9728 Bexhill dr., Kensington, Md., also has admitted breaking into a store in Maryland and holding up two stores in Virginia "to get money for a motorcycle," police said. He is being held in $10,000 bond.

Young Atherton implicated a 16-year-old companion in the holdups, according to police, who said the latter would be turned over to authorities by his parents.

Police quoted Atherton as stating his adventure in crime began about a month ago with entering a Bethesda hardware store, where he and his buddy stole a .38-caliber and a .22-caliber pistol among other things.

Then, the Berkley Bakery, 1515 Seminary rd., Alexandria, was held up by the pair, police said, on March 4 and $150 taken.

Then on March 22, $15 was netted at gunpoint in the High Ice Cream Store, 5435 MacArthur blvd., and the same night the High Store in Shirlington, Va., was held up and $12 taken.

Atherton's admissions cover all these crimes, Lieut. Edgar E. Scott, robbery squad head, declared.

The youth has been identified by Miss Salome Slade, a clerk in the High store here. Police said that, at headquarters, the youth himself identified Mrs. Mabel O'Grady, cashier in the Berkley Bakery and recalled to her the details of the holdup.

Police said the youth voluntarily accompanied them to the District after they visited him at his home.

In the meantime, Virginia and Maryland officials are expected to take depositions from the youth in the other holdups.

Toy Gun Suspect Held After Month's Search

A bandit who police say admitted pulling a series of holdups with a huge toy pistol—patterned after the six-shooter used by oldtime Western "badmen"—yesterday was under arrest.

John Leroy Green, 24, was apprehended in his room at 48 Pierce st. ne. at 4 a. m. yesterday by Probationary Detectives Miller A. Dixon and Shirley F. O'Neill of the robbery squad. The arrest climaxed a month's search.

Dixon and O'Neill began their hunt after Green's picture was identified by Isaac Tepper, 1620 14th st. nw., as that of the man who attempted to hold up his establishment but was frightened away by customers entering.

In the meantime, Green was quoted as saying he got $686 in four holdups and a pocketbook snatching.

Victims who have identified Green are Solomon Maiman, 1501 1st st. nw.; Tobey Applebaum, 1837 19th st. nw.; Herbert B. Brown, 1311 N. Capitol st. ne.; Nora M. Carter, 59 New York ave. nw., and Gwendolyn E. Tolson, 3308 Warder st. nw.

Geen was on probation in connection with another housebreaking at the time of his arrest.

Columbia Hospital Sues to Recover Stolen Money

Columbia Hospital for Women yesterday sued in District Court to get back through insurance $18,975 of the $40,000 embezzled from the hospital.

The suit names as plaintiff the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Co., 1616 I st. nw., which, it declares, had insured the hospital for $5000 a year "against loss sustained through the dishonest acts of its bookkeeper."

The loss through embezzlement exceeded $5000 in 1945, 1947 and 1948 and totaled $3975 in 1946, according to the suit.

The hospital's former bookkeeper, Frank K. Jenkins, 35, of 8341 Colesville rd., Silver Spring, Md., has been indicted by the District grand jury on a charge of embezzlement of the hospital funds.

'Key' Youths Converge on Capital for Convention.

Kisliuk Resigns As Commander Of D. C. Legion

David E. Kisliuk, commander of the District, department of the American Legion, last night resigned his post. His action, he said, was caused by a disability incurred shortly after his election last August.

Active in Legion affairs since 1919, he served for five years as department adjutant before his election as commander. He is a member of the Vincent B. Costello

Kisliuk

Walker

Post No. 15 and has been an employe of the Postoffice Department since 1925.

Joseph A. Walker, vice commander, who was appointed acting commander by Kisliuk last November, was elected to fill the vacancy. He is one of the five department vice commanders elected at the thirtieth annual convention of the Legion.

He has been associated with the Legion since World War I and is a member of the Fort Stevens Post No. 32.

Frank D. Norton, deputy director of District Selective Service, was elected to fill the post vacated by Walker. Both men were installed last night by National Executive Committeeman Owen C. Holleran at the American Legion Clubhouse, 2437 15th st. nw.

Patrol Wagons Have Upholstery In Front Seats

A new and better padded Paddy wagon has been added to the Police Department but the improvements are confined strictly to the benefit of the bluecoats with the "fare" as uncomfortable as ever.

Four of the new wagons—regulation Chevrolet trucks— have been received. The front seats are heavily upholstered and mounted on coil springs.

A special heater and windshield defroster are in the cab section while a two-way radio allows the wagon to double as a scout car. The new wagons have front and rear doors, each locked from the outside, making it unnecessary for a policeman to ride in the rear where the seats are hard as ever.

Principal reason for the change, it was explained, is that patrol wagons now cruise all the time and function at accidents as a scout car or partol wagon.

Key Club Boys Show Promise As Politicians at Convention

Visitors and guests at the Hotel Willard yesterday wondered if voteless Washington was in the midst of a political convention.

On closer inspection, the throng of politicians turned out to be the advance guard of more than 2000 high school boys expected for the sixth annual convention of the Key Club International, being held here today and tomorrow.

They represent 650 United States and Canadian civic service groups sponsored by Kiwanis Clubs for high school age. "Key" youths at the Willard, their headquarters, are drumming up votes for election of their international officers on Saturday.

"Key clubs are not social clubs, you know," explained Howard Bueschel, 18, president of the North Plainfield (N. J.) group. "They're primarily for service to the school, and also to the community."

Howard and his convention companion, William T. Sperry, jr., 17, described the jobs they do as services to their school.

Don Roberson, 16, of Daytona Beach, Fla., told of a five-year project on which his Seabreeze High School Key Club has been working. The club harangued civic groups, sent delegations to the city authorities, and "Now we have one of the biggest and best stadiums in the entire South."

One group organized a blood collection drive for the local hospital, which had no blood bank. Another obtained and planted evergreens of the school yard while still another Key Club organized an auto driving course for students. The club with the outstanding service record for the year will receive a plaque and banner as an award.

The delegates will hear Senator Bricker (R., Ohio) at the opening session, scheduled for 9:45 a. m. today at the Mayflower Hotel. Paul Malone, public information director for the Canadian Embassy, will be the main speaker at the 10:30 a. m. session.

After sightseeing tours, the boys will see a Key Club talent show at the Departmental Auditorium at 8:30 p. m. Representative Wolcott (R., Mich.) will present awards.

Priority Asked For Residents Of Greenbelt

Thomas J. Canning, mayor of Greenbelt, yesterday urged Congress to give residents first preference in the purchase of the Government-owned town.

The Greenbelt official testified before a Senate Banking Subcommittee on a bill authorizing negotiated sale of Greenbelt, Greendale near Milwaukee, and Greenhills near Cincinnati, to veterans and mutual ownership groups.

"We have never urged that the Public Buildings Administration sell our town to private interests," said Canning. "But since the Government has announced its intention of selling Greenbelt, we are pleased that this legislation will permit our property to be sold on a negotiated basis."

Amendments Asked

Canning, supported by Michael G. Salzman, president of the Greenbelt Mutual Ownership Corporation, requested the committee to amend the pending legislation to insure that:

1. Veteran and nonveteran residents be given equal preference in the purchase of Greenbelt homes.

2. Negotiated sale to non-profit mutual housing groups be made mandatory rather than merely permissive as the measure now states.

3. The purchaser must contract for the entire town to guard against "speculators" building adjacent commercial property.

4. The purchaser may also control servicing of the town's public utilities.

Sherrod East, vice president of the Greenbelt corporation; Paul Borsky, its secretary, Charles T. McDonald, Greenbelt city manager, and Mrs. Elizabeth Harrington, member of the town council, also spoke briefly on the bill.

No outright resident opposition to the measure, aimed to expedite the town's sale, was expressed yesterday.

Greeks 'Stamping Out' Communism, Aide Says

The Greek people are "slowly but surely stamping out the ugly monster of communism," John A. Phrantzes, first secretary of the Greek Embassy here, stated in a radio address last night over station WINX.

In a speech commemorating the 128th anniversary of the start of the Greek revolt against Turkish domination, Phrantzes said, "The Greek soldier fighting today is the spearhead of western civilization, which he is defending against the powers of crude materialism and ungodliness."

Suspect Cleared

Policemen Recapture Boy Robber

A juvenile "gunman" who, police say, had admitted three stickups was recaptured yesterday after escaping from the District Receiving Home. At the same time District Court freed a 32-year-old victim of mistaken identity in the holdups.

The juvenile—a 16-year-old—was arrested Monday night in a drugstore which he had entered by sawing a bar from a grilled window.

The youth and two other boys fled the receiving home, 1000 Mount Olivet rd. ne., Wednesday night after climbing from a second-floor window. One lad has been returned by his parents. The 16-year-old was picked up at 5:30 p. m. at 28th and M sts. nw., by Detective Sergt. E. P. Jefferson and Precinct Detective Charles Burns.

Police attribute 24 housebreakings as well as the three holdups to the 16-year-old. Juvenile authorities granted permission to lock him in District Jail overnight.

His admissions to three holdups plus so many housebreakings "I can't remember them all" cleared a suspect, Charles Wesley Coy, 32, of 1432 12th st. nw., who had been "positively" identified by three persons as the bandit.

Robbery Squad Detectives Alfred Deenihan and Lloyd Furr became convinced of Coy's innocence despite the identification and continued a hunt for the real culprit while trying to stall off indictment of Coy.

Yesterday Federal Judge Richmond B. Keech ordered the charges against Coy dismissed. The latter, who had been held in District Jail since March 8, grasped the hands of the detectives in thanks.

The three later conferred with officials of a fur cleaning concern where Coy had been employed as a spotter. As a result he will be back at work there today.

Battlefield Bill Is Sent to House

A bill by Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) to enlarge Manassas National Battlefield Park was sent to the House floor yesterday with backing of the Public Lands Committee.

The committee cited that the park, 26 miles from Washington, "was the scene on July 21, 1861, of the Battle of Manassas, also known as the Battle of Bull Run, the first major engagement in the War between the States."

Better Business Bureau Warns Motorists Selling Used Autos

If a used-car dealers offers you a small fortune for your old car this spring the Better Business Bureau warns you to check his reputation.

An increasing number of persons who have left their automobiles with used-car dealers for resale have been unable to obtain their money after the cars were sold, bureau officials said yesterday. In most cases the owners were offered prices that attractively topped the market value.

Many persons naively signed their titles over to dealers, the bureau said, who sold the cars and then made various excuses for not turning the cash over to the owners.

In some instances payment was made by post-dated checks that bounced and promissory notes that were reneged on at the expiration date.

Assistant United States Attorney J. Warren Wilson said a case is now pending in Municipal Court against a used-car dealer charged with embezzlement. Several persons, Wilson said have asserted they placed their cars in this dealer's hands and have not been paid.

The bureau emphasized that the warning "is not intended to reflect upon legitimate used-car dealers."

D. C. Pupil Load Tops Class Size In 1500 Cities

Overburdening Of Teachers Main Deficiency, Strayer Says at Hearing

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

The average class in Washington has more pupils than the average in 1500 cities throughout the Nation, Dr. George D. Strayer said last night.

The director of the recently completed survey of District schools listed overburdened classes as the major deficiency in the local education program.

Average for 1500 cities, including 94 major cities, is 32 pupils, while in the District it is 36, Dr. Strayer said. Some local teachers find, though, that their classes run to 45 or 50 students, he said.

Addresses Association

The school surveyor spoke at a meeting of the D. C. Public Schools Association in the board room of the District Building. Representatives of nearly 50 civic and parent-teacher associations heard him summarize his comprehensive 2000-page survey report.

"Parents want a job done for their individual child," Dr. Strayer said, "but teachers cannot do it when they must watch over 36 children."

The survey director said that more than anything else District schools need "more teachers and more classrooms to cut down class size."

The 38-million-dollar building program recommended by the survey to provide additional classrooms and replace the worst of the city's schools will meet "minimum needs," he told the civic leaders.

Predicts Willingness

Answering questions at the conclusion of the meeting, he said that he would prophesy that citizens, the Board of Education, the Commissioners and Congress will be willing to meet the challenge of providing better schools for Washington by increased school appropriations.

He brought forth applause when he said he did not think that the Federal Government is carrying its "fair share" of the cost of running the District.

The survey, he said, recommends increased Federal contributions to finance the District as well as an interest-free Federal loan for the building program.

Dr. Strayer said that the survey found much that was excellent in the schools but had highlighted only the deficiencies.

"Our task," he said, "is to get you going to improve what isn't good."

He cited a need for additional pay for teachers beyond the proposed $330 raise, sick leave for teachers to "provide better education for children," and increased funds for supplies.

He said the survey shows that teachers spend as much as $30 to $50 a year to purchase materials used in class.

"Something is wrong," he said, "when a teacher must go into her own pocket."

He urged civic support for improved cafeteria service providing hot lunches for elementary children, libraries that will meet standards, and a medical program that will give students "adequate examinations."

Friend of Family

Mrs. Rogers' Adviser, Says Navy Captain

Navy Capt. Harold A. Latta-Lawrence said yesterday he was "glad" to acknowledge a lifelong acquaintance with Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R., Mass.), who his blonde wife says shattered their marriage.

He would not comment, however, on a separate maintenance suit filed by Mrs. Eilen Diana Latta-Lawrence, of the Roosevelt Hotel.

He said, "Since Mrs. Latta-Lawrence has seen fit to initiate these proceedings in the court, I believe that my reply and my position should be made to the court at the proper time. This is a legal proceeding and nothing more."

Ridiculous, Says Mrs. Rogers

Mrs. Rogers, a widow, has branded the charges as "ridiculous," and the captain said Wednesday they are "fantastic."

The 67-year-old dean of Republican women in Congress, has withheld further comment on the suit.

Captain Latta-Lawrence held an interview with reporters yesterday, when he disclosed he had returned from fleet maneuvers aboard the USS Missouri at 10 a. m. Wednesday.

As for his association with Mrs. Rogers, he said, "I am glad to say I have known (her) all my life."

Knew Whole Family

"I knew her husband and her whole family and I think them some of the most outstanding citizens of this country," he added.

He assisted her in "tax matters and certain political activities," the 47-year-old officer said, after he met her in Boston. He continued to maintain his office there and served Representative Rogers as "political secretary and adviser" for several years," he said.

In late 1941, Captain Latta-Lawrence gave Mrs. Rogers as a reference in applying for a Navy commission, he said.

"She was not one of my sponsors in getting a commission any more than anyone else," he declared. Others were Senator Arthur Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and Warren Austin, United States delegate to the United Nations.

Senator Vandenberg told The Washington Post he did not recall any association with Captain Latta-Lawrence, except possibly in 1946.

Capt. Latta-Lawrence, a graduate of the University of Michigan, said he served in the European theater for three years during World War II for a time on the International War Crimes Commission and returned to the United States in October, 1946.

He was then assigned to work on the armed services' unification program, "but not from the viewpoint of influencing Congress," he said.

His title is special adviser to the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Louis E. Denfeld.

Mrs. Latta-Lawrence has stated in her suit that her husband, "by his cruel and abusive treatment, and by his neglect and abandonment," forced her to live apart from him only two days after their wedding in April, 1948.

Life Threatened, Rep. Rogers Reports

Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers (R., Mass.) said yesterday she has been receiving a number of threatening letters—some of them directed against her life.

Mrs. Rogers rose in the House on Valentine's Day February 14 and remarked that she had received such a letter as a grim "valentine."

"They have been continuing since then," she said today.

The Congresswoman refused to disclose the nature of the threats, or their source, saying only that authorities were aware of them and were "working on it."

A police watch has been set on her home, she added.

The threats are nothing new, Mrs. Rogers said, adding:

"I've had them ever since 1933 when I attacked Hitler, and later the Communists."

13 Homes, 112 Businesses Lost By GI Loan Defaults, VA Says

Only 13 Washington area veterans have lost their homes by defaulting on GI-insured mortgages but 112 have had to call it quits in business ventures.

Figures compiled by the local regional office of the Veterans Administration show the Government, up to February 25, was out $110,872 as a result of the defaults.

A spokesman for VA said there has been an "upward spiral" in foreclosures in the past six months but that the cases here are not expected to mount to such proportions as they have in industrial areas. Steady Government payrolls in the Washington area are the answer, it was said.

The local office covers the District, Montgomery and Princes Georges counties in Maryland, the City of Alexandria and Arlington and Fairfax counties in Virginia.

The 13 vets who lost their homes cost the Government just over $21,000. The 112 who lost their businesses cost the Treasury almost $90,000.

In addition to the actual losses, however, a large number of other veterans have failed to make one or more payments on loans and may be foreclosed if they can't catch up.

In this class are 478 GI home loans, one farm loan and 165 business loans.

These default and foreclosure totals compare with total loans in the past four years of $130,390,663 of which $53,860,584 is the Government guaranteed part. Covered are 15,192 different home loans, 1494 for businesses and five on farms.

Woman Says Couple Set Fire to Her

Accused of setting a woman afire, Frank J. Foster and his wife, Helen, both 33, were held in $5000 bond each yesterday on a charge of assault with intent to kill.

On March 14, a mattress caught fire in the Fosters' room at 12 I st. nw. Mrs. Arleen Eads, 51, of 61 Myrtle st. ne., who was lying on the bed, was seriously burned about the head and was taken to Casualty Hospital.

Interviewed Wednesday by police, Mrs. Eads told them she had argued with the Fosters while visiting in their room. Foster, she said, poured some liquid from a bottle on the mattress on which she was lying and threw a lighted match on the bed.

Arrested Wednesday night the Fosters denied being in the room and said they were visiting someone downstairs when the fire broke out.

Municipal Judge Armond W. Scott continued the case yesterday until April 25. Mrs. Eads is reported in "fair" condition at the hospital.

"The only common article of diet among those who became ill was green apples, which were eaten after breakfast on Sunday. Those who ate several had the most severe symptoms."

Files New Divorce Suit

An amended complaint for a limited divorce, which Mrs. Anna T. Keleher, of the Woodley Park Towers, is seeking from John B. Keleher, once convicted gambler, was filed yesterday in District Court.

Two previous divorce suits, both dismissed, had charged Keleher, who lives at 2400 16th st. nw., with cruelty and adultery and had named as corespondent Mrs. Dorothy Blake, of the Dorchester House.

The amended complaint charges that Keleher and Mrs. Blake committed adultery in 15 other States besides the District of Columbia over a period of several years, and that last January 15, the day following the dismissal of Mrs. Keleher's first divorce suit, Keleher and Mrs. Blake called her and made threats over the telephone.

Two of three men charged with a $10 robbery murder yesterday denied in District Court they had made confessions to police.

The defendants are John B. Greenleaf, 37, and Edward J. Blake, 21, both of Fairmont Heights, Md., and Leroy L. Smith 25, of Landover, Md.

Killed in the robbery last September 15, in the 6200 block of Dix st. ne., was John Gant of 6105 Eads st. ne. The prosecution charges that Greenleaf fractured Gant's skull with a brick and that Blake and Smith were his accomplices.

Yesterday's portion of the trial was devoted to arguments over admissibility of statements allegedly made to police by Greenleaf and Blake. The jury was absent during the arguments.

Defense counsel contended that the statements were not made voluntarily, that the detention of Greenleaf and Blake was illegal, and that police resorted to force to obtain confessions.

Greenleaf told the court he didn't remember making a statement or initialing one. He explained a signature on the last page of the purported confession by saying that it might have been made when he thought he was signing a fingerprint record.

Blake said he could not remember making a statement and he acould not remember signing one.

250 State Views On Arlington Tax

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

More than 250 tax-conscious Arlington residents last night jammed their circuit court room to give their views on a proposed $9,115,457 budget for 1949-50.

They packed every seat, stood in the aisles and doorways and some even sat in the jury box. Judging by applause as the public hearing wore on, a majority seemed to favor the proposed budget which would call for an 89 cent increase in the present $3.25 tax rate.

If the county board, which conducted the hearing, decides to call for any tax increase it will announce it during its meeting Saturday. The board has until April 30 to act on the budget.

Much vocal support last night was shown for the proposed school board budget of $3,067,056, which is $849,000 more than school officials estimate they will spend this year.

B. Alden Lillywhite, president of the Citizens Committee for School Improvement, said residents are "not only willing but able to pay this rate."

This view was seconded by Mrs. Carl Marcey, former president of the Arlington League of Women Voters, which she said also favored the proposed general county budget of $6,048,401.

E. R. Draheim, president of the Arlington County Council of P-TA, went one step further and asked a $150,000 increase in the proposed school budget to cover higher salaries for teachers.

Most vocal speaker on the other side of the fence, Arlington Treasurer John Lock Green, was alternately heckled and applauded when he asked the citizens "who is going to pay for this increase?"

He urged the county board to double the assessment on apartment houses and let it get back to the apartment dwellers who voted recent school improvement bonds.

Harold A. Schilz of the Arlington Democratic Club declared that the county real estate tax had increased from $2.70 in 1944 to its present $3.25, which he said included a reassessment of the property base equivalent to 71 cents more.

He called the proposed tax increase "far too much at this time." The remark drew applause.

Two organizations recommended less of an increase in the tax rate. The Arlington Civic Federation through a member, Robert Cox, asked for a $3.68 tax rate with only minor cuts in both school and county budgets. To make up the difference, the Federation spokesman said $200,000 could be raised by jumping the business license tax on apartments from 15 cents to $1.50 for each $100 gross receipts.

The Arlington Chamber of Commerce, through its secretary, Paul A. Hill, suggested a 30-cent increase in the tax rate to $3.55.

Inquest Holds Man in Death Of Woman, 41

A coroner's jury yesterday held Bill Gaskin, 28, of 918½ Desmond's ct. sw., for the grand jury in connection with the death of his common-law wife, Aurelia Mosby, 41, last Tuesday.

The woman was discovered lead on a cot with head and body injuries about 8:30 p. m. when police responded to a call at the Desmond ct. address.

Deputy Coroner Richard Rosenberg testified at the inquest that death could have been caused by accute alcoholism, complicated by heart, liver, and kidney conditions. He said the woman also was suffering from hemmorhage and shock, due to the multiple bodyblows.

Homicide Detective Sergt. Richard Felber testified that Gaskin admitted beating the woman with a three-foot stick earlier Tuesday. The detective said Gaskin told him the couple had been drinking since early Tuesday and that he had fallen asleep after the beating.

One man was electrocuted and another shocked yesterday when a crane boom struck a high tension wire in front of 7423 15th ave., Carole Highlands, Md.

According to police, a crane was being used to place 26-inch pipe sections in a storm sewer project. Quarles was placing the hook at the end of the boom to a piece of pipe when the top of the boom struck high tension wires and electrocuted him. Quarles was pronounced dead by Dr. J. N. Tasting is believing! Naturally, you won't take our word that our Kosher meat is the best tasting believable — even our friends were dubious. So, we gave them the pudding test*—and ordinary people began to act like enchanted people after they'd had their first taste of our roast beef, hot corned beef and pastrami cut N. Y. style in generous slices with a knife! They said it was magic. It isn't. Unless you consider the combination of rare good food, sparkling clean kitchen and superb chefs, magic. The best part about it is that you don't have to reserve our "treats" to dining out. You can enjoy them at home—by visiting our delicatessen department.
Perk up your appetite with the tangy perfection of our canape spreads, relishes, cheese or meat slices. Try them, you'll be back for more!

One on the Aisle—

Kelly's 3-Bagger Is Swell Musical

By Richard L. Coe

MAYBE IT'S SPRING, but I had a swell time at the Capitol's "Take Me Out to the Ball Game." Most of you will, too.

Wonderful Gene Kelly is in this one, along with Frank Sinatra, Esther Williams and Betty Garrett. There is, I grant you, about a half-hour too much plot, which makes things sag in the middle, but the rest of it's frothy and fun adding up to Metro's best musical in a long time.

The picture's at its best in the musical numbers and with Kelly, Sinatra and touches of Jules Munshin spoofing things in general. The boys' efforts to tie in with Esther and Betty's manhandling of Frankie are amusing and gay.

Until the yarn gets involved with the traditional misunderstandings and those racketeers who try to scoop up cool grands in unbelievable fashion, the plot's lightly handled. The boys had the right pitch in the early part of the picture by just using the yarn as a framework. Would that they'd tossed out the heavy villainy of Edward Arnold and let the songs and comedy carry the show.

Gene and Frankie start things off smartly as Heaven's gifts to baseball who do a dance act off-season and a snappy little act they've got, too. The period is roughly 40 years ago, but fortunately too much trouble isn't spent on this; you get Esther swimming about in a suit that would have shocked the bloomers right off grandma.

Gene's Triple Play

In fact, for once the never-never land of Technicolored musicals has that aimless fancy they all try for and so rarely locate. The costumes and settings, looking spankingly dreamy in cheerful Technicolor, are all part of the fun.

It turns out that the ball team the boys are going back to in Sarasota is owned by a gal and the gal is Esther. Betty enters the picture from a ball park box, falls madly for Frankie and you can work out the yarn from there.

Kelly, as always, is the infectious charm of this one. Besides doing several happy production numbers, the fellow dreamed up the story (fundamentally it's sufficient, though the writers overdid it) and, with collaborator Stanley Donen, also staged the dances. They're lively and inventive, so, all told, it's Kelly's picture, a real triple play.

Miss Garrett, too, comes into her own after a bush league start some months back. She has a gal-chases-man number with Frankie and her brash zing will make you glad she's around, Metro's answer to Twentieth Century's celestial Holm.

So there you are. It's spring-like and jaunty, "Take Me Out to the Ball Game."

LAST NIGHT brought the opening of the Mount Vernon Players' "Knickerbocker Holiday," the Maxwell Anderson-Kurt Weill musical . . . There are 36 players in this revival, which poses quite a problem for the limited facilities of the undercroft theater at 900 Massachusetts ave. . . . Orvill French is playing Peter Stuyvesant, John Seavers is Washington Irving, Shula Martin, Tina Tienhoven . . . Others in the cast include Todd Stanton, William F. Bohan, Clayton B. Hayes, James F. Lout, Rich Pentecost, Morton Schneider and Thomas E. Wengrove . . . The run will continue through April 9, Sunday nights excepted . . . For reservations call DIstrict 1484, between 7:30 and 9:30 p. m.

CIRCUS FAN NO. 1—Mel in Hildreth—reports that the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey big top will be passing through the Potomac Yards on Sunday, April 3, on its way to New York . . . This is Hildreth's annual scoop, and when he says the circus is on its way North you can believe that spring is here.

Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—Dr. Albert Einstein came to New York from Princeton last week to call on Dr. Stephen S. Wise and congratulate him on his seventy-fifth birthday. Dr. Wise was touched and said: "I can't tell you how much I appreciate your calling on me" . . . "Not at all," said Einstein. "I'm calling on you only to preclude the possibility that you may call on me."

Dr. Einstein and Dr. Wise left together, and in the hallway of the hotel they met Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., and his son, Franklin D. Roosevelt 3d . . . Roosevelt introduced Einstein and the youngster and said: "When you grow up, you'll be able to say that you met Albert Einstein, one of the greatest men in the world" . . . "Oh, not 'greatest,'" said Einstein. "Let's say 'fairly well known.'"

Sidney Kingsley, whose newest hit, "Detective Story," opened at the Hudson Theater Wednesday night, is one of the most painstaking playwrights in the American theater. His research is thorough and then he measures every word in the writing. In describing how he wrote this play, Kingsley said: "I wrote three lines the first day" . . . And the second day?" he was asked . . . 'On the second day,' he said, "I erased two of those lines."

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., March 24.—Baseball has suddenly become important to the United States State Department, it seems. A few weeks ago the word went out quietly to Commissioner A. B. Chandler to please ease up on any slurring references to baseball in Mexico. Today, the State Department sent an emissary to the Nats' training camp in another move in the game of international politics.

The United States Government is eager to bring Venezuela within America's sphere of baseball influence since learning that the American game is often more esteemed below the border than United States statesmanship. So Mr. Louis M. Dentis of the State Department checked in today to unfold a plan.

POVICH

He's collecting autographed balls and bats and gloves for distribution to Venezuelans, who now have 62 teams playing in a current amateur tournament in Caracas. They will be donated to the outstanding Venezuelan players, with a nice message from the American stars. The glove Bobby Doerr of the Red Sox is signing says: "In friendship, to the best second baseman in Venezuela."

AMERICAN businessmen in Venezuela are financing the purchase of equipment and the tour of the State Department missionary in the big league training camp. Business relations with Venezuela are nice, and they'd like to keep them that way. The frenzy for baseball in Venezuela has already put bullfighting in second place, and the United States would like to capitalize on Venezuelans' fondness for the American game.

It's no secret that Venezuela's oil is pretty indispensable to United States defense programs. There is some doubt that America could fight another major war without the three million barrels the Venezuelan wells spout daily. And everybody is happy about the reciprocal good will between the two countries.

The State Department counts President Del Gado Chabaud of Venezuela among the good friends of the United States. He is the President of the Junta, the revolutionary government in office between elections, and his term could be a long one. He has no truck with Communists and it is said that he has told the State Department to give him a list of any Commies in Venezuela and he'd run 'em out.

FROM ALL REPORTS, Brooklyn is tame as a baseball burg compared to Caracas. Even the amateur games are played to standing room in a park seating 35,000. So rabid are the Venezuela fans that armed police frisk everybody who comes into the park, lest hot tempers prevail during the game and somebody gets hurt, mortally.

The police are in the stands with guns and nightsticks, just to encourage good order. A couple of years ago, just to express their displeasure, some of the Venezuela fans waited until after the game and set fire to the grandstands. Things are getting better, but the fans are still being frisked for weapons.

At times there have been American umpires in Venezuela, but only the braver souls go back. They were on the scene one day when an American pitcher drew down the anger of the home town fans. After he walked four men in a row, he was placed under arrest by the chief of police. For safe keeping and his own protection? Un-huh. The chief of police booked him for not bearing down.

ALEX CARRASQUEL, the Venezuelan pitcher who was with the Nats for a spell of years, used to be a national hero down there. Now, they won't even let him play. Since he jumped to Mexico and was banned from organized ball, the Venezuelans want no traffic with him. In their view, he did the wrong thing. There's great respect for America's game down there.

Brooklyn picked up three Venezuelan players this year, and Carrasquel's brother, Alfonso, appears to have the makings of a shortstop. Commissioner Chandler himself is going to Caracas this June to present a trophy to the championship team. American scouts are now thick in South America.

The Yankees played down in Caracas on a spring jaunt a couple of years ago. The oil-rich Venezuelans were charged $22.50 per seat, and paid greedily. Seventy per cent of the population is living off oil revenues. Laborers average 60 bolivos, or $20 a day. The Yankees were outsmarted. They went down there for a modest guarantee, never dreaming of seats at $22.50 per copy, and the native promoters cleaned up.

Nats Belted By Reds, 6-4; Yost Swats 2d Homer

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., March 24—Ray Scarborough and Walter Masterson, who are supposed to represent some of the Nats' better pitching, didn't today. They were belted with enthusiasm by the Cincinnati Reds and the Nats took a 6-4 licking.

At that, the Nats had no worse than 4-4 tie going into the eighth inning at Tinker Field before 2000 spectators. Eddie Yost and Sam Dente brought them up to that estate with a pair of well-timed swats.

Yost, the new hitting sensation in the Nats' camp, walloped his second out-of-the-park homer in two days, in the fourth inning. He smacked one over the left field wall off Bud Livel with Ed Stewart on base, to cut the Reds' lead to 4-2.

Dente Drives in Two

All of a sudden with two out in the seventh, Dente tied the score. He doubled to center to score both Masterson, who had walked, and Gil Coan, who had singled.

That's the closest the Nats came to winning. Masterson, after pitching two scoreless innings, was assaulted by Charley Kress double to center that opened the eighth and Kress took third on Litwhiler's scratch single. He scored as Sauer hit into a force play at second.

Just to make it more emphatic, the Reds wrested another run out of Masterson in the ninth. Corbitt's single to left, and Bobby Zintera's three-bagger to right moved it home.

Robinson Boots One

Eddie Robinson's fumble on a throw from Al Kozar launched a pair of Cincinnati runs in the first inning. What followed was a two-bagger by Kress, and Litwhiler's single to left.

In the third, Scarborough lost his control, walked three men and threw a single to Filipowicz for two more runs.

Manager Joe Kuhel reshuffled his batting order, an almost daily occurrence, but it didn't help much. He put Dente in second place and moved Yost to fifth. He dropped the non-hitting Eddie Robinson, who was supposed to bat clean-up, into sixth place.

Gil Coan continued his .400-hitting pace despite his failure to get a ball out of the infield his first three times up. He collected a pair of singles in the seventh and ninth.

In the ninth, Pinch-Hitter Mark Christman and Coan singled to put the tying runs on base with one out, but Dente couldn't duplicate his seventh-inning heroics that got the Nats two runs. In fact, he rapped into a game-ending double play.

NOTES: The Reds groaned en masse when Second Baseman Bobby Adams lay inert after sliding into second in the seventh inning and was carried from the field . . . his spikes caught as he slid and he suffered a slightly wrenched knee, reports Doc Bohn, the Red's trainer, who used to be the trainer of the Washington Redskins . . . Jake Early, still complaining of a sore arm, has yet to appear in the Nats' lineup, but might any day . . . Meanwhile Rookie Len Okrie is giving Al Evans a battle for the No. 1 catching job . . . Masterson's three strikeouts came in different innings . . . when he threw his fast ball he was never in trouble. When he threw his curve, he was inviting it, and it came.

My Story . . . By Joe Louis

Mike Jacobs Enters Joe's Life

The sixth of 15 installments

I WON five in a row in Chicago and four of them were knockouts. I came back to Detroit for my next fight. They had me matched with Alex Borchuk from Canada in the Naval Armory. I knocked him out in the fourth round, but the crowd didn't know how tough that one was. This Borchuk hit me harder than any fighter hit me before or since. He fetched one to my left jaw that broke one of my back teeth.

It was 12 o'clock when I got away from the crowd in Detroit that night, and came home. My mother was up, waiting for me. The family heard the fight on the radio. They weren't too excited about it. They didn't know how close I came to losing.

I came along good after that. I beat Adolf Wiater from Green Bay in Chicago on Sept. 25. Then Mr. Roxborough signed me against Art Sykes from New York. We fought in Arcadia Gardens in Chicago and I hit him a hundred times but couldn't keep him down.

I didn't want to hit him any more. When he went to the floor in the eighth, and got the count, I was glad it was over, but when I left the club the doctors were still with him in the dressing room.

I called the hospital all night to find how he was doing. He was a boy Damon Runyon liked. Mr. Runyon told me later, "You almost killed my boy." This Art Sykes never fought again. People say to me, "Joe, you ever feel sorry for someone you got to punish like that?" and I say, "They come in there to give it to me. I can't say it's a sorry feeling, but I don't like to do it."

ALL these fights, my purses got better and I had plenty to send home. My mother used to say she was glad she'd helped me go my own way in getting to be a fighter, and giving up the violin. After I beat Massera in November in 1934 I cleaned up what our family had got on relief, and right after that I took on Lee Ramage in Chicago Stadium and I got over $2,500 for my end.

I knocked him out in the eighth round, but he didn't come easy. I think that Ramage was the best boxer I ever had against me. I could hardly lay one right on that boy. I told Blackburn I was afraid he would take me on points, but Chappie said, "You go in there and box." He said, "You tire him out, and then find an opening." In the eighth I saw his arms drop a little. Chappie had taught me to watch another fighter's arms. He said, "When a fighter is fresh he keeps his arms at regular height. When he's tired and wants to make believe he's fresh, he lifts too high, and that's the giveaway. That's when you take him."

I KNOCKED this Ramage down three times in the eighth. His corner threw in the towel and I got another knockout. I figured if this kept up I could soon get my mother that house.

All this while I never talked much. Chappie talked to reporters, or Roxborough, but I had nothing to say. Mr. Roxborough kept coaching me on manners and such.

When I was coming up in Detroit I met Jack Johnson, the old Negro champion. He came to my camp later two or three times. He was a colorful guy. I heard a lot about him. He was pretty smart in the ring. When people said to me, "Joe, you don't want to make the mistakes Johnson made," I'd think that was right, but I didn't want to make the mistakes some white fighters made outside the ring, either, once they got a title.

When I got to be champ half the letters I got had some word about Jack Johnson. A lot was from old colored people in the South. They thought he disgraced the Negro. I just figured he did what he wanted to do, and what he did had no effect on me.

IN six months fighting pro I had 10 knockouts and two decisions. Mr. Roxborough and Mr. Black let me come home for Christmas with the family and it was a big Christmas. I had money to buy clothes and watches and such for all my kin. We had big times. Then they got me back to training. My first fight in 1935 I beat Patsy Perroni of Cleveland in the Olympic Stadium in Detroit. My end from that fight came to more than $4,000. I never figured to make that much in one night before I was 21 years old—or ever.

I was getting up in weight now. When I fought Hans Birkie in Duquesne Gardens in Pittsburgh the week after the Perroni fight, I was up to 194. This Birkie could fight good, but before the end of the 10th he could hardly keep from just going on his face. They threw in and carried him to his corner and I got another knockout.

AFTER that Mr. Roxborough and Mr. Black took me out to Los Angeles for a return with Lee Ramage at Wrigley Field. I knocked him out with a left hook in the second round. I got more than $3,000 for that.

My picture and my name got in all the papers after I beat Ramage the second time. They called me "Brown Bomber" and it got out that the writers thought that up, but they didn't. Mr. Roxborough was talking about me, one night in Detroit, to Scotty Monteith, who was a fighter and then a manager. When Mr. Monteith went home that night he got the idea. He called Mr. Roxborough on the telephone. He said, "I got a good name for your boy. You call him The Brown Bomber." That's how it was.

CHAPPIE Blackburn started getting me in shape for a fight with Natie Brown in Detroit. That fight meant a lot. Mr. Roxborough and Mr. Black had made a deal with Mike Jacobs who runs the Twentieth Century Sporting Club.

Mr. Jacobs was bucking the Madison Square Garden promoters who controlled the heavyweight class, which meant they controlled the top money in fighting. But the Madison Square Garden promoters were on the outs with the Hearst sports writers—Mr. Ed. Frayne, Damon Runyon and Mr. Bill Farnsworth. The Garden promoters wanted to raise the rent at Madison Square Bowl for the Hearst Milk Fund fights.

Different promoters tried to get me after I beat Ramage the second time, but most of them had shady propositions. Jimmy Johnston who was the promoter for Madison Square Garden, he wanted me too, but there was always a catch in it.

NATIE BROWN GOES DOWN
Louis Floors D. C. Fighter in '35 Bout

ONE promoter called Mr. Roxborough on the telephone in Detroit about that time. He said, "You got a colored fighter and you're a colored manager. You'll have to take less than other fighters, and your man will have to lose a fight, now and then." Mr. Roxborough hung up on that man.

That's where Mike Jacobs came in. He talked to Mr. Roxborough. He came out to watch me fight. Then he told me, "Joe, you can fight on the level when you fight for me. If you win, you win. You don't have to drop any for anybody." He said, "I'll make a lot of money for you." He told Mr. Roxborough he would fix it for me to fight Primo Carnera in New York, to give me my first fight with an ex-heavyweight champ. Mr. Roxborough and Julian Black said that was okay.

THEN Mr. Jacobs got the Hearst Milk Fund writers behind him, and they fixed to take the heavyweight fights away from the Garden promoters. They figured they could do it with me.

I finished up what Mr. Roxborough already had signed me for.

I beat Red Barry in San Francisco in three rounds on March 8, and got $4,000 for it and that made my average $1,000 a week for those first three months in 1935. Three weeks later I fought Natie Brown in the Detroit stadium.

Mr. Jacobs hired a special train and brought all the New York sportswriters out to Detroit to see the fight. Mr. Roxborough and Mr. Black talked up what this fight meant to me. They said it could start me up into where I could get maybe $100,000 a fight or better, if I showed up good in front of the New York writers. I didn't worry much, but this keyed me up.

Natie Brown fooled me. He didn't come out open. He came out covered and it was hard to find a hole to shoot at. I got through a few times. He cut pretty easy and I worked on his eyes, but I couldn't put him away. He stayed the ten rounds.

Sadowski's Goal to Tie It at 80-80 Is Disallowed

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The Caps completed their version of The Philadelphia Story last night by erasing the Warriors from the first round of the BAA playoffs, 80 to 78.

To post their second straight victory in the best of three set, the locals survived a blistering stretch drive which saw the Philidelphians almost wipe out an 11-point deficit in the last two minutes of play.

Ed Sadowski, the Warriors' massive pivot man, missed sending the game into overtime by a hair's breadth. A scant half second before the game ending buzzer sounded, Sadowski threw up a hook shot which tottered on the rim, then rolled in for the basket which would have tied the game at 80-all.

Referee Pat Kennedy, however, ruled that the shot was made after the buzzer. His decision sent the Uline crowd of 2987 home happy, but dispatched Coach Eddie Gottlieb and his Warriors to Philadelphia in tantrums.

Another Series Next Week

As a result of their precarious victory, the Caps tackle the winner of the current Baltimore-New York series in another series next week with the first game on the road. New York won last night to even its set with the Bullets at 1-1.

Chink Crossin, Penn U's contribution to the Warriors, and Gail Bishop, a Washington U. product, almost wrecked the Caps in those closing moments, whipping in two lightning field goals each to culminate a Warrior drive which began when the visitors trailed by 19 points in the third quarter.

The undermanned Caps were dog-tired at the end and so were the Warriors, but Crossin and Bishop summoned enough strength in the dying moments to almost upset the applecart.

Leading 79 to 68 with two minutes to go, the Caps made only one point—a free throw by Sonny Hertzberg—while the Warriors drilled in ten.

This was the third threat the Warriors had thrown into the Caps, but by far the most critical.

They Keep Coming Back

Midway the final 12-minute quarter, Crossin and Jake Bornheimer fired up a Philly sweep which took 8 points off the Cap lead and brought Philly to within 5 points of their conquerors.

Johnny Norlander stopped that one with 3 baskets to push the Caps in front by 11 points with only 2 minutes to play.

In the third period, when a Kleggie Hermsen-inspired surge shot the Caps in front by 19 points, 53-34, Crossin got hot and the Warriors had whacked 9 points off the Cap advantage by the quarter's end, which found Washington ahead, 59 to 49.

Jim Lacy Nears All-Time Record

Denver, March 24—Jim Lacy, Loyola of Baltimore scoring wizard, came within four points of the all-time college record here tonight when he carried his team to a 53-51 victory over Gonzaga in the second round of the National Catholic basketball tournament.

Lacy won the game with a drive-in basket and free throw in the last minute that sent his total to 2158. It earned him another shot at the 2161 record of Brooms Abramovic of Salem College.

As Interior, Recreation Meet

Contradictory Racial Policies Snarl Golf Course Situation

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

It was obvious yesterday that an almost hopeless impasse between representatives of the Interior Department and District of Columbia Board of Recreation was developing over contradictory racial policies.

On the surface, a two-hour discussion over control of the local golf courses was conducted in a cozy atmosphere in Assistant Secretary of Interior C. Girard Davidson's office.

In fact, with all parties present, Davidson said, "We had a satisfactory meeting. We've cleared up a lot of misunderstandings and plan more meetings."

But a reporter's questions were brushed aside by Davidson and Harry S. Wender, chairman of the District Recreation Board.

Ignored were the leading one about the vast difference of opinion on segregation.

On Wednesday, Wender called a press conference to announce an historic step of the recreation board. It voted unanimously to run the golf courses on a nonsegregated basis if it were given control of them. And that marked the first time in the board's seven-year history that a formal stand had been taken on the heretofore touchy issue.

Interior's reaction was quick. Speaking for the department yesterday, Carlton Skinner, public relations director, said, "The action of the board is all right as far as it goes, but it doesn't go far enough to meet the situation."

Skinner was referring to the fact that most of the Recreation Board's activities are segregated.

Skinner elaborated by saying, "Mr. Davidson meant that unless the board complies fully and completely with the civil rights program, the parks office would not be in a position to discuss turning over the golf courses to it."

On Wednesday, Wender anticipated this stand by Interior. He made it plain that the board's action of nonsegregation related only to the golf courses.

There appears to be little chance that the Recreation Board will alter its policy. Wender stated that while he personally was in favor of the complete abolishment of segregation in the District, he firmly believed in proceeding slowly.

Mrs. Alice Hunter, lone Negro member of the Recreation Board, said yesterday, "I would like to see our segregation policies abandoned immediately. I think the law as it now stands calls for abolition. Please realize, though, that mine is a minority opinion."

Asked if she had any support on the board, Mrs. Hunter said she had some.

Actually the golf course issue fades into insignificance if the entire battle for recreational control is considered. For instance, in dispute is the right to run 62 recreation areas in the city.

On the golf matter alone yesterday, the special Public Lands Subcommittee investigating it announced public hearings will start 10 a. m. Tuesday.

S. G. Leoffler, concessionaire since 1921, is expected to be one of the first witnesses called.

Irving C. Root, superintendent of National Capital Parks, which directly supervises the municipal courses, said, "We welcome any fair, unbiased investigation."

And Ray Alvis, still working furiously to try to land the concessions contract for a Cleveland company, appeared overjoyed at the news of the start of the hearings.

Alvis exclaimed, "That's wonderful. We'll really get the whole thing before the public now. Maybe they'll be able to learn where the body lies."

Eddie Grant, Marshall Gain AAU Finals

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Heavyweight Eddie Grant of Apollo and Middleweight Eddie Marshall of Police Boys Club No. 2 continued the successful defense of their District AAU boxing titles as the tournament passed the semifinal stage last night at Turner's Arena.

Grant, who has held the Golden Gloves crown as well as the AAU title for a year, played a persistent right to Thurman Moore's ribs and earned a split decision.

Surprise of the night came when Bantamweight Eddie Gilchrist withstood a last round rally by Dave Primrose to earn a unanimous victory

Ol' Bobo Tries Again Today

Orlando, Fla., March 24.—Louis "Bobo" Newsom, unemployed pitcher, tomorrow will make a pitch for a job. He will be on the mound for Chattanooga against the Nats at Tinker Field.

Newsom offered to don a Chattanooga uniform and "mow 'em down," and the proposition was accepted by President Joe Engel, of Chattanooga. Engel later gained the consent of Clark Griffith.

Newsom will pitch three innings. He didn't admit it was a stunt, despite the fact he has not worked out in Florida. "My arm is never out of shape," he boasted.

He hasn't promised to sign with Chattanooga, he says. "There are other clubs bidding for me. I just thought I'd show 'em what I could do."

Newsom has been out of organized ball since being released by the Giants last June. For the rest of the season, he pitched semi-pro ball in North Carolina and Virginia. He has indicated he may yet sign with a major league club. There are also indications he may sign with Chattanooga. — POVICH.

Kitchen Police Gets Top Weight for Bowie 'Cap

King Midas, Piet Also Rated High

With Washington's race fans straining at the bit—Bowie opens Monday—a District-owned horse has been assigned top weight in the $10,000-added Rowe Memorial Handicap, the inaugural day feature.

Kitchen Police, one of three eligibles from the Gustav Ring barn, was given 116 pounds by Racing Secretary and Handicapper John P. Turner, sr. The sprinting star, bred and brought to the races by Alfred G. Vanderbilt, is not the most feared of the three-way entry.

Ring's colors may be entrusted only to Rare Jewel who seems to be a fit-and-ready performer, what with those six Florida victories. Rare Jewel gets in rather light with 111. Ring's Top Pilot, if sent postward, would tote only 109 pounds.

The Rowe could turn into an intercity battle—Washington-Baltimore-Detroit. The Monumental City has King Midas in with 115 and ready to perform for the formidable Bobanet Stable owned by Bruce Livie, while Michigan's industrial center, in all likelihood, will have the Bomar Stable's crack Piet in the running at 114.

Mrs. O. L. Nyberg's star mare, Irisen, winner of four Florida starts, drew 112 pounds and will have a steady backing in the test of six furlongs.

Other weights include: Grandview Stable's Erigeron, 113; C. C. Tanner's Nearway, 113; Rarco Stable's Tight Squeeze, 112; Dion Kerr, jr.'s Flying Weather, 111; Brookhill Stable's Flag Drill, 110; S. W. Labrot, jr.'s Repand, 109; Rarco Stable's Darby D'Amour, 108; S. W. Labrot, jr.'s Dutel, 107; H. G. Bedwell's Daily Dip, 106; P. A. Rothfuss' Gain A'Foot, 105; S. Greenfeld's High Trend, 104.—HAIGHT.

Jockey Permane Breaks Leg in Gulfstream Spill

Hollywood, Fla., March 24 (AP).—Jockey Bobby Permane today suffered a broken leg and a possible shoulder fracture when he fell from his mount during the fourth race at Gulfstream Park race course.

Attaches at the Hollywood Hospital said Permane's leg was "badly broken" and that his condition was such they were yet unable to X-ray his shoulders.

"He is suffering shock, but his condition is in no way critical," an attache reported.

The accident occurred as the field of eight neared the far turn. Jockey Willie Horrissey also was spilled. Except for bruises, he suffered no injuries.

Observers said one horse, which appeared to be Another Zac, came over against Claire Dauber, Permane's mount. Tally, ridden by Morrissey, also was bumped. Both Permane and Morrissey went down. Permane rolled over several times.

Potomac Hunt Trials Listed On Saturday

By Harry De Mawby, Jr.

The Potomac Hunt, having wound up a successful season of good fox-chasing, will hold their annual Hunter Trials Saturday at the hunt kennels near Potomac, Md., starting at 10:30 a. m.

Potomac's members and those of surrounding hunts are expected to turn out in full force to exhibit in the numerous events designed to test the development and experience of horses.

The Junior Plate event will start the day's program and is open to riders who have not attained their nineteenth birthday and has hunted his entry with a recognized hunt during the last season.

The Travilah Plate is next in line and limited to those equines who have gained their hunting experience during the last season, not having hunted prior to October, 1948.

Following is the Handy, a test of performing tasks frequently called for in the hunting field, the Elinor Wheeler Exnicios Trophy event for members of the Potomac Hunt only, and the Master's Plate class, open to all members or subscribers of recognized hunts.

The Foxcatcher's Plate originated at last year's meeting and proved to be the feature spectacle of the program.

The Tally-Ho event, run over a modified course and judged on time alone, is intended to demonstrate the hunter with apparently the best burst of speed necessary to be with the hounds at the kill.

The Montgomery County Plate event for pairs of hunters and the Potomac Plate test for teams of three will wind up the well rounded schedule.

The champion of the trials awarded to the entry accumulating the highest number of points will receive the Gracias Trophy to be retained for one year.

John Maloney of Warrenton, Va., and Robert Young, Orange County Hunt's Master, have been invited to judge.

Md. Senate Group Ok's Pimlico Shift

Annapolis, Md., March 24 (AP).—The Senate finance committee voted approval today of old Pimlico's request to move its racing program to the Laurel race track.

The vote of 9-6 sent the bill to the Senate floor, where opponents were not expected to let it advance without a fight.

The State racing commission has sanctioned the transfer.

The Maryland Jockey Club, owner of both ovals, had asked permission to consolidate all its racing at newer and larger Laurel.

The lucky bettor picked Down Jack, a 20-to-1 shot in the third race, and Randalstown, a 100-to-7 outsider in the fifth race, both steeplechase events.

D. C. Ring Solons Okay Title Battle

The request made by Matchmaker Gabe Menendez for a District Middleweight Championship scrap featuring Joe Blackwood and the winner of next Monday night's headliner at Joe Turner's Arena, between Ken Stribling and Johnny Hansbury, has been okayed by the District Boxing Commission.

The matchmaker said that the bout probably would be staged on one of the early outdoor shows at Griffith Stadium, and the commission has indicated that it is favorable to this plan.

The bout should prove a real test for the sensational Joe Blackwood, who knows how to kayo and who is unbeaten in his four local showings.

As a result of the commission's decision, interest in next Monday's battle has sharpened intensely, for the participants are evenly matched.

Private Pyramid Tumbles—So You're Unlucky—How About This Guy?

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

IF YOU were near the top when your pyramid toppled and believe you are down on your luck, read on: A guy phoned me early last week and asked if I had any information on the field and odds for the Grand National. It didn't take long to determine that he had been notified that he held an Irish Sweepstakes ticket on a horse in the famous English race. He was smart enough not to tell me his name but said his horse was Locale Prince and that he would call back Friday to see if I had any news. He failed to phone but I guess he knows that on Wednesday, Locale Prince fell at Aintree, broke his back and died. Well, at least the horse went all the way and wasn't simply scratched . . . in answer to inquiry: no fishing license is required in waters affected by sea tide. For instance, Little Falls is the limit on the Potomac . . . when Larry McPhail switched from baseball to racing, it was believed there would be less friction in the majors, particularly around the Yankees. However, there seems to be more word battles than ever coming up from the Grapefruit League . . . I understand Jockey Clarence Picou, apprentice sensation at Bowie last fall, has signed with the Brookmeade Stable . . . Buck Early, a promising and speedy back from Hagerstown, Md., was injured last week in a Maryland U. scrimmage. He's a freshman. I heard some nice things about his ability up Charles Town way last December. He will be shipshape soon, I'm told.

Haight

I'VE HEARD MANY stories about smart wildfowl. For instance, a certain type of duck, when crippled, will dive to the bottom, hold on to something and drown rather than be captured. However, I'm finding it hard to believe the one about wild geese assisting a wounded companion home by flying under him. My North Carolina friends say it's true, they've seen them do it . . . Going fishing? Well, be careful. Insurance company figures show that of the 3241 deaths in the United States last year connected with sports, fishing, swimming and bathing accounted for almost half. Hunting was far back with 10 per cent . . . Looks as if Bobo Newsom might have to swallow his pride and pitch in the minors. Seems it's not a buyers market for Newsoms in the training country . . . Bucky Harris, who was accused of being too liberal with high-stepping Yankees last year, suspended the Nats' Goose Goslin in the heat of the 1925 pennant race, which the Washington club won . . . Former Jockey Ivan Parke, who will saddle Olympia if the colt goes in the Kentucky Derby, bred the 3-year-old and sold him to Fred W. Hooper, the present owner.

THE ROWE MEMORIAL, Bowie's $10,000 opening feature, was first won by Battleship in 1930. The sturdy fellow later became a jumper and earned fame as a Grand National winner . . . Since football was installed at Notre Dame in 1894, the team has had 27 different head coaches. Those following Knute Rockne were: Hunk Anderson, Elmer Layden, Edward McKeever, Hugh Devore and Frank Leahy . . . Bob Knepley, of the Barney House gym staff, told me the youngsters are forgetting about war. It's been a long time since a boy with a sharp stick has been found doing "bayonet practice" on the heavy boxing bag, he reports . . . Sam Dente, Nats' current shortstop, is slightly deaf. I suggested that the club furnish him with a hearing aid and the office nitwit said, "Kuhel should get all of them hitting aids" . . . Blue Peter, winter book favorite for the Kentucky Derby, won $189,185 as a 2-year-old, doubling the dollars earned by his nearest rival . . . I'm waiting for Arthur (CBS) Godfrey to get to work on the story of Joe (Warriors) Fulks tripping over his own garbage can . . . The majors will rule out those long gloves being used by first basemen after this season. It's about time. I've been expecting to see a first sacker using a lacrosse racket.

Lineup Anybody's Guess

Blackwell's Form May Mean 1st Division or Cellar to Reds

(This is another in a series of stories on the prospects of major league baseball teams.)

By Joe Reichler

TAMPA, FLA., March 24 (AP).—The success or failure of the Cincinnati Reds this season depends largely upon the condition of Ewell Blackwell, their star right-hander.

A healthy Blackwell could well mean a first division berth for the Reds. Otherwise it would be no surprise if the Red legs finished in the National League cellar.

(Although he does not admit it, there is a suspicion that Bucky Walters, the Reds' personable manager, thinks so, too.

"But wait awhile before you start counting 10 over us," he added. "We might surprise some people. I wouldn't be at at all surprised if we finished higher than most people think.

"We've got some young pitchers on the club that others don't know too much about.

Walters, starting his first full season as manager, currently has little idea of his opening-day lineup.

Outside of the ailing Blackwell, there isn't a "name" ball player in the bunch. There is not an outstanding rookie in camp, although Newcomers Lloyd Merriman, Jimmy Bloodworth and Johnny Lane look good.

Ted Kluszewski, who was gaining status as the season progressed last year, will open at first. Bloodworth at second and holdovers Red Stallcup at short and Grady Hatton at third round out a so-so infield.

LOOK FOR FRANK BAUMHOLTZ to start in right, Johnny Wyrostek in center and Hank Sauer in left. Baumholtz batted .296 last year, but drove in only 30 runs. Wyrostek batted in 76 on a .273 average. Sauer hit only .260, but drove in 97 runs and hammered 35 home runs, a new Cincinnati record.

No fault is to be found with the catching staff. Ray Mueller and Ray Lammanno again will handle most of the work. Dixie Howell, former Dodgers and Pirate receiver, appears to have beaten out Johnny Pramesa for the third string assignment.

Walters is trying to round up a pitching staff that will give him five starters, two relief men and three spot hurlers. Johnny Vander Meer, last year's ace, Howard Fox, Ken Raffensberger, Herm Wehmeier and Blackwell, when he's ready, are tabbed as starters. Harry Gumbert and Millard Howell, a 17-game winner at Syracuse last year and possibly himself will be the firemen.

Braves Hop On Red Sox Again, 8-4

The Tribe hit timely and took advantage of wildness by Sox Hurlers Joe Dobson and Dave Ferriss.

Winning Pitcher Johnny Sain was touched for seven hits in the first five innings but was strong with men on base. Only score off Big John was in the third inning when Dom DiMaggio slugged an inside-the-park home run to right center.

Ted Williams, Sox slugger, who hasn't been hitting, emerged from his slump with three hits in five trips, one of them a double. Until today he had made only four hits in exhibition games.

Satch, Lou in Form

Hollywood, Calif., March 24 (AP).—Old Satchel Paige gave up only 1 hit in the 3 innings he worked today as the Cleveland Indians defeated the Chicago Cubs, 7 to 4. The victory broke a four game losing streak for Cleveland.

The big blows for the Indians came on a pinch homer by Al Rosen and two round-trippers by Manager Lou Boudreau.

Phils Beat Cards in 11th

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 24 (AP).—With speedy Richie Ashburn scoring the winning run from second on an infield hit, the Philadelphia Phils defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 5-4 today in an exhibition contest that went 11 innings.

The decisive blow was a hot ground single by former Cardinal Dick Sisler. Second baseman Red Schoendienst made a diving glove stop but recovered slowly and Ashburn beat his throw to the plate.

Tigers Blank Yanks

Lakeland, Fla., March 24 (AP).—With Virgil Trucks and Lefthander Ted Gray limiting the losers to seven hits, the Detroit Tigers shut out the New York Yankees, 5-0, in an exhibition game today.

The Tigers scored four runs off the southpaw offerings of Ed Lopat, who pitched the first six innings for Casey Stengel's men. Tom Byrne, another lefty, hurled the final two innings for the Yankees, and gave up the other Tiger run.

Burbank, Calif., March 24 (AP).—Irving Medlinger and Red Embree of the St. Louis Browns combined to shut out the New York Giants, 2 to 0, today.

Doubles by Ken Wood and Jack Graham in the fourth produced a run for the Browns off Sheldon Jones. With Clint Hartung pitching, St. Louis got another tally in the sixth on three walks and an infield out. Medlinger allowed three of the Giants' five hits in his six-inning stay on the hill. Hartung pitched hitless ball, his only shortcoming being lack of control.

Scrubs Beat Bums' Varsity

Vero Beach, Fla., March 24 (AP).—Gil Hodges, whom the Brooklyn Dodgers still regard as their regular first baseman, caught a full game for the scrubs today as they beat the varsity, 4-3, before the interested gaze of Warren Giles, general manager of the Cincinnati Reds.

There have been rumors of an impending Dodger trade with the Reds.

Villemain Fights LaMotta Tonight

New York, March 24 (AP).—Robert Villemain, the rugged little French middleweight, is a welcome departure from the old-time foreign invader. No one can accuse him of seeking push-overs.

Tomorrow night the squat, short-armed Frenchman takes on Jake LaMotta, the iron-chinned Bronx contender, in the feature 12-rounder at Madison Square Garden.

This will be the 24-year-old Villemain's second fight in the United States. He made his debut in the Garden last January 7 against Steve Bellois, another top-ranking 160-pounder with a wicked wallop, and lost for the first time in his pro career.

African Heavyweight Fight Is Financial Flop

Johannesburg, South Africa, March 24 (AP).—Saturday's nontitle heavyweight fight between Britain's Champion Bruce Woodcock and South Africa's Johnny Ralph looks like a certain financial flop.

With two days to go only $28,000 worth of tickets have been sold. Woodcock alone has been guaranteed $40,000.

Uline Sued For $2700

Madison Square Garden yesterday filed a $2700 suit against Uline Arena for alleged nonpayment of guarantees to the New York Rovers hockey team for games played here in 1946 and 1947.

Miss Elizabeth Rothgeb, executive vice president of the Uline Ice Co., termed the suit "a minor thing."

But Attorney Frederic J. Ball, representing Miguel J. Uline, who is vacationing in Florida, said he may enter a countersuit.

"Mr. Uline claims that the New York Garden owes his Washington hockey Lions $1500 for nonpayment of guarantees in Baltimore during the 1947 season," said Ball.

"Mr. Uline says that the Garden operated Baltimore of the old Eastern Hockey League as a farm team for its major league New York Rangers, and that the Lions haven't been paid yet for five appearances at Carlin's Park two years ago."

Ball continued, "It has been Mr. Uline's position that he will not pay the Garden the $2700 until the Garden pays him $1500."

The Garden's suit, filed by Attorney Thomas G. Carney in Municipal Court, contends that the New York Rovers, sponsored by the Garden, haven't been paid for nine matches at Uline Arena. The guarantee was $300 per game.

The Lions played in the Eastern League in 1946 and '47, and moved into the American League this year when the Eastern temporarily disbanded. According to Ball, Uline plans to shift the Lions back to the Eastern League, which is reorganizing for 1949-50.

Flaherty Signs Molenda as Aid

A veteran of professional football since the days of Red Grange's New York Yankees in 1927, Molenda has seen action both as a player and assistant coach for the New York Giants and Green Bay Packers. During the war, he coached the powerful San Diego Naval Training Station team.

In intercollegiate football, Molenda was an outstanding fullback at the University of Michigan.

Fred Beats Earl Cochell In Four Sets

New York, March 24 (AP).—Fred Kovaleski of William and Mary College slammed his way into the semifinals of the National Indoor Tennis championships today by pulling off the biggest upset of the forty-sixth annual tournament.

The Detroit star came from behind to score a four-set triumph over Earl Cochell of San Francisco, the Nation's sixth ranking amateur, 3—6, 6—4, 8—6, 7—5.

His surprising victory carried him into the round of four against Defeating Champion Billy Talbert of New York, who sailed past Ed McGrath of Brooklyn in another quarter-final test, 6—3, 6—2, 6—2.

With both semifinals carded for tomorrow night, the antagonists in the opposite bracket will be top-seeded Richard (Pancho) Gonzales of Los Angeles, the turf court champion, and former indoor title-holder Don McNeill of New York.

Kovaleski's upset overshadowed the women's singles semifinals in which Gertrude Moran of Santa Monica, Calif., and Nancy Chafee of Ventura, Calif., gained the right to battle it out Saturday for the title vacated by Pat Todd.

No higher than twenty-second in the national rankings of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, Kovaleski was seeded seventh in this tournament.

When Cochell, seeded third, won the opening set without a loss of service, the gallery set itself for an easy straight-set victory.

He won the first three games of the second set. Cochell took the next three. After three more had followed service, Kovaleski scored a break-through in the tenth to even the match.

After missing a chance at set point in the tenth game of the third set, following a swap of service breaks, Kovaleski ended that one with a break in the fourteenth.

The fourth set was almost a carbon copy of the second. Cochell knotted that one at 5-all but Kovaleski ended it with two straight love games, the last one on the Californian's service.

In the first championship decided, Miss Moran and Gonzales won the mixed doubles crown by outlasting Miss Head and Talbert, 6—4, 4—6, 9—7.

It was the third match of the day for Talbert, who teamed with McNeill to enter the men's doubles finals by turning back Cochell and Kovaleski, 7—5, 6—3, 6—4.

Philly Loses Again to Caps

points to trail high-man Crossin by a single point, and Jack Nichols boosted the Caps in front comfortably again, but the Warriors kept coming back, refusing to yield.

Both Teams Crippled

The Philadelphia Story may have been a different one at that if the Warriors had been at full strength for the game. Their ace scorer, Joe Fulks, who injured his side in a household accident Wednesday, didn't even suit up for the game, watching proceedings dejectedly from a seat back of the Philly bench.

But the Caps had their misfortunes, too. Bob Feerick was still hobbling and Freddie Scolari and Matt Zunic, also injured, sat out the affair. Albeit both were dressed anad would have been used if absolutely necessary.

The Warriors dominated the affair only briefly, holding a 10-5 edge in the firstquarter. McKinney, Nichols and Hertzberg shot the Caps into a 22-20 first quarter lead and the locals continued to hold the upper hand, leaving the court at halftime with a 39-33 advantage.

REBOUNDS—Some bandage and adhesive tape firm missed a good bet in not sponsoring the game since five Warriors and four Caps were swathed in some sort of bandage or tape . . . officials had to hold up the game briefly to ask a patron to desist from sounding a noisy sireen whenever a Warrior attempted a free throw . . . Zunic's ankle injury is not serious and he is certain to be ready to go by next Monday . . . Arnold Heft, Washington official, was all decked out in his whistle-tooting uniform, but sat out the game as an alternate. He received $50.00 for spectating.

Hermanski Saves Rookie Morgan, Swept Out to Sea

Vero Beach, Fla., March 24 (AP).—Outfielder Gene Hermanski of the Brooklyn Dodgers today rescued Rookie Infielder Bobby Morgan when a strong undertow swept the later out to sea.

Morgan clutched at a wooden piling and suffered cuts of the body before Hermanski caught up with him. Eddie Miksis, also in the party, helped in the rescue and then drove Morgan to Dodgertown where he was treated by Dr. William Lyles, camp physician.

Earlier in spring training, the 22-year-old Morgan, a standout shortstop for Montreal last year, suffered a badly sprained left ankle which virtually eliminated him as a third base candidate.

It is expected he will be kept out of uniform two or three days.

And stands and waits for copy when . . . The news is extra hot . . . He also gets the cigarets . . . The coffee and the rolls . . . That help remind the local staff . . . That they have human souls . . . For him there is no glory and . . . Indeed no handsome pay . . . But if he perserveres he will . . . Behold a better day . . . The day the city editor . . . Decides to try him out . . . With who, what, where and when and why . . . The news is all about.

Mary Haworth's Mail

When Couple Married, Both Sets of Parents Agreed to Furnish Home; Man's Parents Kept Promise, Bride's Didn't, and Storm Threatens

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Two years ago our son, Tom, married Ruth, a very charming and beautiful girl whom my husband and I love dearly. At the time they married it was agreed that Ruth's parents and my husband and I would furnish a home for them.

My husband and I have met our part of the agreement and even more, while Ruth's parents have only partly kept their promise. Yet they are people of means, with a home in the country and a home in the city; they entertain lavishly and have a son and daughter away in college.

Tom refuses to ask them for further furnishings, so has bought and paid for several expensive pieces himself. Last year the Browns (I'll call them) promised to repay him the money he had spent on furniture, but to date they haven't done so, nor do they speak of the money owed. And Tom and Ruth refuse absolutely to broach the subject to them.

Man's Parents at Loggerheads

HOWEVER, my husband is furious to think the Browns would welsh on their promise and vows to speak to them about it, which I positively forbid him to do, because I am sure it would cause a break in our good relations with them.

We and the Browns have got along beautifully; we visit each other often; are extremely fond of each other as individuals; and Ruth loves us and Tom respects her parents. Thus I beg my husband to forget the promise that wasn't kept, and never to think of it again; but he is adamant in his resolve to beard them about it soon. After 30 years' happy marriage, we are quarreling over this bone of contention—and I would welcome your impartial viewpoint. E. S.

Bridegroom's Dad Is Too Mercenary

DEAR E. S.: In my opinion, your husband's attitude is vulgarly mercenary and destructively busybody. It seems he doesn't know when to keep his nose out of Tom's affairs. He is more interested in getting "something for nothing" for his son, than in promoting the general welfare of the newlyweds.

He may argue that he is a stickler for keeping promises; but basically he is sore as a boil about the Browns' failure to meet his outlay, dollar for dollar, simply because he has spent more on Tom's home furnishings than Ruth's parents have, so far.

It would be interesting to know who engineered the agreement that both sets of parents were to furnish a home for the bride and groom; and it's a pretty safe bet that the idea was conceived and

Women Urged To Aid Annual Cancer Drive

A general call for women of Washington to join in an all-out fight against cancer is being issued by Mrs. Louis H. Renfrow, chairman of the women's division of the 1949 drive, starting April 1. Mrs. Renfrow urges all women who recognize the importance of continuing the fight against a disease that strikes one out of every two homes in the Nation, to attend this meeting to be held in the auditorium of the Washington Gas Light Co. at 11 a. m. Saturday morning.

Women attending this special meeting will witness a special motion picture emphasizing cancer's seven danger signals and will hear important cancer messages. Among the speakers will be Dr. Peter D. Commanduras, medical director of the District of Columbia Division of the Cancer Society; E. Cleveland Giddings, general chairman of the 1949 campaign; Mrs. C. Ashmead Fuller, who has been devoting her full time to the Garfield Cancer Detection Center for the past three years, and Mrs. Louis H. Renfrow.

Miss Margret Rogers of the District of Columbia division of the society showed the film, "Early Diagnosis of Cancer," yesterday to a group of junior nurses at Freedmens Hospital. This is an integral part of the District of Columbia division's educational and community service program which Mrs. Renfrow and her group will discuss at the Saturday morning meeting.

Two women who will be active in the cancer drive are Mrs. Dennis Chavez (left) and Senora de Dillon. Mrs. Chavez, wife of the Senator from New Mexico, will be in charge of the special events committee of the women's division in the drive. Senora de Dillon, wife of the Ambassador from Ecuador, is chairman of the campaign headquarters information service at 1508 H st.

Total Abstinence

Cassie St. George's Snub Of Olive Dunkings Earns Unwanted White Ribbon

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

CONGRESS' most femininely fetching Representative, Katherine St. George, is in a somewhat delicate position these days due to that recent commotion about cocktail parties. A reporter asked for a quote on this very moot subject, and Mrs. St. George went firmly on record: "I never go to them."

Immediately the news must have been flashed to her district's farthest reaches, to women's organizations everywhere. The response was instantaneous. WCTU leaders, presuming that abstinence from cocktail parties meant abstinence from liquor, wired congratulations. Female clubs gushed. Women of Cassie St. George's fine caliber were what the world needed.

So now if Mrs. St. George is seen sipping at dinner, she'll disillusion her admirers, and if perchance she's forced to attend a cocktail gathering she'll fall smack off the pedestal.

New Job for Alison

FORMER Burma Ace John Alison, who recently resigned as Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aeronautics, will go West, enter a new venture in transportation. He'll headquarter in Redwood City, Calif., work with a company called the Transit Van which has been encouraged into existence by the North American Car Co. of Chicago and the Hughes Research and Development Co. In the same company with Alison will be Gen. Fred Anderson, who was so popular in wartime Washington.

Johnny, incidentally, is the guy who piloted picturesque Commando General Wingate behind the Burma lines on every flight except the last fatal expedition. There's a nice story about Alison, told here before but worth repeating.

In prewar days when the Chinese were buying planes here, he was asked to demonstrate a new model. After being given the nod, he took the ship up, turned it inside out, landed lickety split on a dime-sized space.

The awed Chinese gasped. A hundred such planes would knock down all attacking Japs. A high brass American who'd been watching the tricky performance overheard this remark, snorted indignantly, "It's not the planes you need—but a few pilots like Johnny Alison."

D.C. Mayflower Descendants To Fete Leader

Col. Walter Merriam Pratt, governor general of the General Society of Mayflower Descendants, and Mrs. Pratt will be honor guests of the District Society of Mayflower Descendants at a reception on Saturday at 8:15 p. m. at the National Headquarters of the Sons of the American Revolution. Frank B. Steele, secretary general of the SAR is a deputy governor general of the General Society of Mayflower Descendants and arranged for the meeting place.

Governor General Pratt will give a short talk on the Mayflower Society House development. The main part of this house was built by Edward Winslow, great-grandson of Edward Winslow, first governor of the Pilgrims in Plymouth, Mass., and with the additions made in succeeding years the house makes a beautiful place for the social meetings during the triennial congresses of the General Society. The business meetings of the Congress are held in the First Parish Church, Plymouth, a constant reminder that the Pilgrims sought not the wealth of seas nor the spoils of war but "they sought a faith's pure shrine . . . freedom to worship God."

promoted on your side of the fence. Maybe you hatched it first, then sold it to Dad, next confided it to Ruth and Tom, and proceeded from there to delicately extract a corresponding "pledge" from the Browns.

Situation's Bad for the Newlyweds

ALSO possibly you were first to grumble, sotto voce, when the Browns fell behind Dad in generosity; and only began to take a hush-hush tack after you'd got Dad's dander fully up, and Ruth and Tom were sweating profusely in embarrassment.

In any case, the undercover hullaballoo must be viciously bad for Tom's morale, thus insidiously damaging to the marriage, too—if he has some healthy attributes of adult-age character and wants to behave like a man in relation to Ruth.

As for his buying a few furnishings out of his own pocket, why shouldn't he? Sensible parents would tacitly encourage that breath of self reliance. And if the expenditure was more than he could rightly afford, perhaps humiliation drove him to the flourish, in order to assert—as salve to his pride—an ambition to do something on his own for his wife. I'd like to think he had that much quality—and wasn't angling for repayment from Ruth's parents eventually.

In conclusion, if Ruth and Tom want nothing more said, that should be the end of it. Dad would be fouling his contribution if he made an issue of the Brown's lesser showing. M. H.

"SIPPING Soda Through a Straw:" Miss Teen continues to hold her own as a fashion authority in spring, 1949. She wears clothes that match her own gay ways and lets her older sister worry with set styles and manners. For dress-up occasions our model, at left, chooses a toasted almond toned wool coat, cut on princess lines, with neat, pointed collar. She perches a natural straw hat well back on her head and keeps her medium long bob, despite fashion dictates. Her umbrella of green taffeta, matches the ribbon on her flower-trimmed chapeau. A cheerful little corduroy suit is worn by the model, at right. Her suit is the color of shrimp, but it is available in lilac, maize and blue. The fly-away, hip-length jacket is double-breasted with eight gold buttons, and the skirt is semi-flared. Costumes available in Teen Department of Lansburgh's

Junior Mister

MRS. GEORGE ALLEN, wife of the former Ambassador to Iran and present Assistant Secretary of State, is the proud mama of a thoroughly masculine 10-year-old son. Lately young Allen was forced to endure considerable humiliation.

Taken shopping for the first time since returning from Tehran, he became enraptured with a local department store's escalator. Mrs. Allen, in a rush to complete chores, left him riding up and down, instructed him to meet her later in the department where petticoats are sold.

The lad dawdled as long as possible, then, locating Ladies' Lingerie, asked a saleslady where petticoats were to be found. The lady absentmindedly asked, "Petticoats? For you? Why they're right over there."

Argentine Visitor Aims At Better Understanding

By Genevieve Reynolds

An appeal for better understanding between the women of the United States and Argentina was made yesterday by Mrs. Bruno Thomas, wife of the chief engineer of an Argentine commission to inspect railroads here. She issued her call at a luncheon honoring Senora de Corominas, wife of the president of the Governing Board of the Organization of American States. The event, sponsored by the Pan American Liaison Committee of Women's Organizations, was held at the United Nations Club.

"As an elder sister I beg you, with the help of God, to unite our hearts in a great friendship based upon a deep understanding," said Mrs. Thomas, "in a will for peace and unity above everything else."

She reminded her audience that Argentina and the United States are governed under similar constitutions.

Listing other similarities between the two countries, she mentioned climate, flora, fauna, populations made up of European immigrants and settlers. "Chief difference is that the United States was colonized by the Saxon race and Argentina by men of Spanish blood," she noted.

"As for the Argentine women they are well versed in national and international politics," declared Mrs. Thomas." They take great interest in current world problems; they know the geography of the world and the political complications. Our women are acquainted with the clauses of treaties made at Chapultepec and Geneva, plus all the work of the General Assembly of the United Nations in Paris last autumn."

The speaker gave credit to Senora Maria Eva Durate de Peron, wife of the Argentine President, for obtaining suffrage for the women of her country.

Incidentally, Mrs. Thomas revealed that the gauchos of mixed Indian and Spanish blood, who worked on great cattle ranches there have been supplanted by fair-haired, blue-eyed gauchos of European blood.

Speaking on the same program was Senorita Digna Munoz, Chilean journalist, now teaching Spanish here and writing a book. From 1940 to '46 she served in the Chilean Labor Department as inspector for agriculture, mines, industry and commerce. In 1946 she was commissioned by her government to study the work of women in the United States, and in 1947 was granted a scholarship by the United States Women's Bureau to study the economic and social status of women in Latin America.

"Chilean feminists fought the same battle for suffrage, job recognition, better economic and social conditions as did your pioneers of feminism," declared Senorita Munoz.

She said that it was inevitable Chilean women would receive the vote since they were the first Latin American women to receive university degrees.

"With the enactment of the January 9 law, which gives political rights to women in Chile, they are able to elect as well as be elected President, Senator or Deputy," she explained. "But still there are many hardships for women to overcome due to old customs, especially in the labor field."

Also included on the program were several Spanish musical numbers given by Mrs. David H. Kinchloe, pianist, and her daughter, Mrs. James H. Davis, soloist.

Among the honor guests, in addition to Senora de Corominas were Senora de Lleras, wife of the Secretary General of the Organizations of American States; Mrs. William Manger, wife of the assistant secretary general of OAS; Mrs. Tom Connally, wife of the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee; Mrs. Dennis Chavez, wife of the New Mexico Senator, and Mrs. Homer Ferguson, wife of the Michigan Senator.

Mrs. John T. Lucker, president, Pan American Liason Committee of Women's Organizations, presided.

Mrs. Maroshek Elected President, Chapter M

Mrs. W. B. Maroshek was elected president, and Miss Betty Vandersluis, vice president, of Chapter M, PEO Sisterhood, at a recent meeting.

Other officers for the coming season are Miss Gerda Mones, recording secretary; Miss Frances Baker, corresponding secretary; Miss Glenna Spraker, treasurer; Mrs. G. E. Peck, chaplain, and Mrs. W. J. Farrell, guard.

Mrs. W. B. Maroshek and Miss Gerda Mones were elected delegates to the district convention, with Miss Jane Rommel and Mrs. W. J. Farrell as alternates.

Fix Quick Tricks With a Ready Mix

By Lucia Brown

MODERN "mixes" provide you with a painless way of persuading your friends that you're a whiz at cooking.

You can use the mix "just so," without dressing it up particularly, knowing friends may spot the fact that it's a prepared dessert immediately. But if you fancy it up a bit, they'll be fooled by the individual flavor you manage to impart, wonder how on earth you made such a wonderful dish so quickly.

Even with "extras" added, mixes save a great deal of time and effort. And, in many cases, the recipe using a prepared mix is cheaper than one in which the entire recipe is made of separately purchased ingredients. Here are a few suggestions:

Marble Cake

Make up a batter with white cake mix according to the directions on the package. Divide batter equally into two portions. Blend 1 square of melted chocolate or ¼ cup cocoa in one portion of batter. Spoon alternately light and chocolate batter into a well-greased ring mold. Bake according to package directions. Cool and frost with Dark Mocha Frosting.

Dark Mocha Frosting

Confectioner's sugar
½ cup milk
2 squares chocolate
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon instant coffee

COMBINE CHOCOLATE, butter and milk in top of double boiler. Cook until chocolate is melted. Stir well; let stand until lukewarm. Add coffee, mix well, and beat in enough sugar until of right consistency to spread.

Lemon-Pineapple Whip

1 No. 2 can pineapple juice
1 package lemon pie filling
1 cup sugar
5 tablespoons water
1 tall can evaporated milk, chilled and whipped

HEAT PINEAPPLE JUICE in saucepan over low heat. Stir in combined lemon filling, sugar and water. Cook, stirring frequently, until thickened. Cool. Fold in whipped evaporated milk. Pour into freezing tray of refrigerator and freeze 3 to 4 hours. This recipe makes six servings.

FROSTING tricks can transform simple devil's food cookies, made with prepared mix. Follow directions on the package for roll cookies and use your favorite fancy cutters. Bake and cool, then take your pastry tube in hand and have a wonderful time prettying up the cookies. Use a simple frosting, made by creaming 2 tablespoons butter, adding 2 tablespoons milk, a few drops of vanilla extract, and enough confectioner's sugar to make a thick mixture

Cherries a la Suzette

2 cups prepared pancake mix
2 tablespoons melted butter
1 egg, beaten
2¾ cups milk (about)
1 package frozen red or Bing cherries
1 cup sour cream

QUICKLY add mix to the combined liquids in a bowl and stir lightly. Add more milk if necessary to make batter thin enough so that it just coats the back of a metal spoon. Heat a buttered 3-inch seasoned frying pan. Carefully coat the bottom of the pan with the batter, starting to pour from the handle side and tipping the pan. The pancakes should be paper-thin, with a "crepe" effect. Lightly brown on both sides, turning with a spatula. Sweeten cherries, if desired, and heat to serving temperature. Place a spoonful in the center of each pancake. Fold the pancake sides over the cherries and serve with a garnish of sour cream. This recipe makes 24 to 30 crepe pancakes.

Meringue Topping

1-3 cup granulated sugar
1 egg white, stiffly beaten
2 tablespoons confectioner's sugar

GRADUALLY beat sugar into the egg white. Spread over cake and sprinkle with confectioner's sugar.

Make It Yourself

Chicken Rio Grande Is Delicious

HERE are full directions for making Chicken Rio Grande, a succulent dish which combines chicken, tomatoes and rice and is seasoned with chili powder:

CHICKEN RIO GRANDE

Seasoned flour
1-3 cup fat
1 medium onion, chopped
1 green pepper, diced
2 cups tomato juice
½ cup raw rice
2 chicken bouillon cubes
1 cup boiling water
Salt
Pepper
Chili powder

DREDGE CHICKEN in seasoned flour. Brown on all sides in fat. Lower heat. Add onion, pepper and tomato juice. Dissolve bouillon cubes in water and add to mixture. Season with salt, pepper and chili powder to taste. Cover and simmer until chicken is tender (about 1 hour). The last 20 minutes, add rice. Cover and cook until rice is tender. This recipe makes six servings.

Serve Buffet Refreshments Anytime To Guests at Your Wedding Reception

At your wedding reception, regardless of the time of day, serve easy-to-plan buffet refreshments, suggests the April "Beauty and Brides" issue of Charm, the magazine for the business girl.

At any reception, formal or informal, a buffet is entirely proper, Charm says, and it is easier to serve and less expensive than a sit-down breakfast or an elaborate dinner. The menu can be built around one fairly substantial dish, such as chicken a la king, lobster Newburg, or, at an early breakfast, scrambled eggs with sausages.

Champagne is the customary beverage of the wedding reception, but a sauterne or a May wine punch is an excellent alternative.

Brown Sauce for Savory Touch

Brown sauce is excellent with ham, chicken, turkey or veal. Melt 2 tablespoons of butter in a sauce pan and stir constantly until well browned. Add 3 tablespoons of flour, mixed with ¼ teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Now brown the butter and flour together. Add gradually 1 cup of hot water in which 2 bouillon cubes have been dissolved. Then add ½ glass of currant or plum jelly. Stir until smooth. Cook for 15 minutes in the top of a double boiler, stirring occasionally If this sauce is preferred thinner, boiling water may be added. Stir thoroughly.

Delicious Dressing for Fruit Salad

Potatoes cooked with their jackets on retain all the vitamin C and vitamin B values of raw potatoes, so say the experts from the United States Department of Agriculture. Peeled potatoes lose 20 to 30 per cent of their vitamin C and some of their vitamin B during cooking.

Cream cheese thinned with apricot whole fruit nectar until it is a runny consistency makes a delicious dressing for fruit salad. Try this on crisp shredded cabbage too.

Southern Cooking 'Overrated,' Says Magazine Writer

One of the most overrated items in the world is Southern cooking, according to Ralph McGill, a Southern newspaperman. In the current (March 26) Saturday Evening Post, Mr. McGill deplores the corrupted corn bread, chicken fried in old crankcase oil, salad dressing fit only for drowning witches and similar culinary crimes which have spread a blight across Dixie.

"Poor cooking has become standardized across the Nation, but in the South it has been glamorized," Mr. McGill writes. "There is magnificent Southern cooking . . . but relatively few Southerners ever know of it, much less eat it. It must be sought, as must good cooking anywhere, and most of it is in the homes."

The best Southern cooking probably is the best cooking in the Nation, Mr. McGill declares. And the best of that is to be found in the Cajun and Creole kitchens of Louisiana Among the recipes he offers is this one:

Creole Gumbo

"Items: 2 tablespoons butter or lard, 3 tablespoons flour, 1 bunch scallions, 1 pound shrimp, 2 dozen oysters, 1 sprig parsley, ½ teaspoon thyme, 1 pint oyster water, 2 pints water, pinch of cayenne, celery stalk, salt and pepper, ½ teaspoon file powder (powdered sassafras leaves).

"Melt fat in iron kettle. When hot, brown finely chopped scallions in it. Then stir in flour. Add chopped parsley, thyme and chopped celery. Cook for one minute. Add oyster liquor and water to ingredients in kettle. Add shrimp and salt, cayenne and pepper. Cook very slowly in covered pot for an hour and a half. Add oysters and cook until they curl at the edges. Remove from fire and add file powder. Soup must not be reheated after the file is added. Serve with rice that is passed at the table and put by each person into his bowl of gumbo."

MARKET MEMO . . .

CROAKERS are the headline news on the fish market this week. They're landing them in large numbers now off the Virginia Capes, though ordinarily this fish doesn't become plentiful until early April. There are nice, big ones on the Washington market and the price is lower.

FOR LENTEN DISHES you'll also find mackerel, sea bass and porgies in good supply. Oyster prices are as low now as they've been all winter, the Fish and Wildlife Service reports. Remember that there's only about one more month of fresh oyster eating left in this area. Scallops are higher; the fishing boats haven't been able to catch many because of stormy weather at sea.

BEEF, VEAL AND PORK are priced about the same as last weekend. The trend is higher on hams and other smoked meats and on lamb. Eggs are an excellent buy for main dishes.

CITRUS FRUITS are still outstandingly plentiful, at the same reasonable prices. Grapes are coming in from South America; the Malagas and Ribiers are not expensive, considering the time of year. Apples are high and pears have gone up slightly.

AS TO VEGETABLES, you'll find cabbage prices are rising. The Texas crop is short, largely as a result of the January freeze, according to the Department of Agriculture. Lettuce, so expensive in recent weeks, will be a little cheaper this weekend. Good buys include carrots, potatoes, green beans and all leafy vegetables except spinach.

Meatless Main Dish

Jiffy Spring Casserole is a hearty meat-free main dish that can be quickly and easily mixed from ingredients right on the pantry shelf. Combine 4 ounces cooked medium noodles, 4 hard cooked eggs cut in eighths, 1 10½-ounce can condensed vegetable soup, and 1 10½-ounce can tomato soup. Pour the mixture into a greased 1 quart casserole and sprinkle bread crumbs over the top. Bake in moderate oven (35 degrees F.) 25 minutes. Serve hot.

It turns Bears into Dears... it's a wonderful, wonderful spirit-lifting success

If housework's giving you the horrors and you've got those early morning blues, take time off for a steaming, flavorful cup of this grand new coffee. It's "angel-making."

What's the secret? Selecciones (pronounced seleck-see-o-nays). That's the Spanish for selected . . . some coffees selected mainly for perfecting body . . . others selected mainly for perfecting flavor. Yes, the flavor coffees in this mouth-watering new blend are hand-selected 1-2-three times!

1. Hand-selected from shade-grown, pedigreed trees.
2. Hand-selected at the peak of ripeness.
3. Hand-selected before and after curing.

No wonder it's so delicious. Try it! If you don't think it's the best coffee you ever tasted, just send us the unused portion and we'll give you double your money back. Get your pound today! (It's vacuum-packed, of course.) And long live your houseful of early morning angels!

How to Make Fiber Place Mats

I would like to make some place mats out of natural burlap, but I am unable to remove the unpleasant odor. Would you give me a suggestion? R. H. D.

Washing the burlap and exposing it to the sun and air as it drys will help to lessen the odor. Or, if you don't want to wash it, spray it with paradichlorobenzine, a moth-proofing liquid, which also deodorizes. After spraying, hang in the sun to dry and thoroughly air. If these methods lessen but do not entirely remove the odor, spraying oil of cedar over the cloth will cover the unpleasant odor with a more pleasant one.

I am interested in making a rug from silk stockings. I have heard vaguely of such a thing, but don't know how to go about it. Could you give me complete instructions and about how many stockings would I need for a rug about 3 by 4 feet? Also, can it be tyed after it is made? B. T.

Dye the stockings first by using a good commercial dye. For use in rugs it is well to boil the dye into the stockings so that the color will be more permanent. If you wish to use brilliant colors, you should remove the stocking color before dyeing by the use of a commercial color remover sold where dyes are sold. When the stockings are dyed and thoroughly dry, cut them into strips, starting at the top and cutting in a spiral downward so that each stocking makes just one strip. If the stocking is heavier at the top, cut the strip narrower there so it will be the same finished weight as the wider strip cut in the thinner places. Now, if you are making a hooked rug these strips can be used as they are. If you plan to make a crocheted rug, sew the strips together and wrap into a ball before you start to crochet.

Because of the large amount of work involved in making a rug, many people use only woolens for them—feeling that the material in the silk stockings is too light to give the necessary weight and wear.

Do you, or does one of your readers have a recipe for poppyseed strudel? In the type I mean, the poppyseed is used for the filling in the same manner as apples, in what appears to be a cooked sauce. I have eaten it in Hungarian restaurants, so I suspect it is of central European origin. E. H. S.

I'm sorry, I've not been able to find a recipe for poppyseed strudel. How about it, readers?

Do you have any books, pamphlets, or leaflets on "Parties for All Occasions"; that is, teas, dances, banquets and miscellaneous parties? I would like to purchase something along this line and if you cannot fill the order, would you be kind enough to refer me to some company where I can get the information desired? Would appreciate anything you might do in helping me secure this information. M. E. G.

I'm sorry, we do not have this sort of printed material to send out, but you will find many books on the subject in bookstores and libraries. One such book is "The Year Around Party Book" by William P. Young and Horace J. Gardner (published by J. P. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia). Here's another idea which might be helpful: As you see party or game suggestions in magazines and newspapers, clip and file them. In this way you will soon have innumerable ideas which can be used as they are or adapted to other situations.

Also, some national women's magazines have party idea pamphlets which they will send for a small fee. I suggest you write to the editorial offices of the magazines for their lists of pamphlets which they have available on this subject.

PETUNIA!

Let poets sing the praises of
The hills, the sapphire sky
I sing the golden wonder of
A glorious Pumpkin Pie!

And it's even more gorgeous, Petunia, if you'll sprinkle the 'op with finely grated sharp cheese, the minute you take it out of the oven. It melts to form a delectable topping.

Bishop-Bracken.

Talking Out Fears

During the last war great strides were made in overcoming what was known in the first World War as shell shock. The more intelligent officers and the well-trained doctors urged their men to accept the fact that it was natural to be afraid in dangerous situations. The conflicts set up in men when they felt that something was wrong with them if they were fearful seemed to be a major cause of nervous breakdown.

Wise parents and teachers are increasingly helping children to accept the normality of being afraid. When a youngster is fearful about animals, new experiences or anything else, he can best be helped to deal with his fears through having adults around him show sympathy rather than to shame him. It is especially helpful when a parent can say, "When I was your age, I was scared of being by myself." Or, "Everybody is afraid of something. There would be something wrong with you if you weren't."

With this sort of reassurance, the youngster is then better prepared to accept help in dealing with the thing that causes him to be afraid. It's comforting to know that there isn't something wrong with him.

Trust a Man to Find the Easiest Way

YOU CAN TRUST a man to find and use the easiest way of doing a job. So it is natural when a high-school lad has to iron his own shirts, he will find a five-minute technique. In a picture story in the current Woman's Home Companion a teenager gives his technique of how it's done. The key rules are: Sprinkle shirt evenly well ahead of time and fold so it will unroll on board in position for a split-second start; move the shirt just as few times as possible—saves time, avoids mauling and wrinkling of shirt; conserve energy by sitting down to iron and use the left hand as well as the right.

The starting point is to have the shirt on left end of board with right sleeve in position to iron. After doing the cuff, iron the shoulder seam, switch iron to left hand and head down-sleeve into the gathers. Then flop the sleeve and do other side.

After the sleeves are done, grab yoke by bottom corner and line it up in front of you with shirt doubled smoothly under. Hold yoke taut and iron it smooth and dry. Flip collar toward you and iron right side. Iron from one of the points to center, switch iron to left hand and do other side. Then put shirt on board wrong side of back out, collar at left, iron left half of back, then bring left front up over, iron that. Shift and do right side the same way.

Do Not Disturb

Children Build Independence When They Are on Their Own

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It is natural for all children to want to widen their horizons and attempt to do more and more of the things they see adults do and become more independent of them.

Independent activity has its hazards and the overly protective parent prefers to keep the child dependent upon her and be spared all the anxiety which might be hers were she to give him more freedom to act upon his own initiative.

While it is essential that a parent know the limits of a child's capacities and when he must remain under her protection, it is a grave mistake to refuse the child opportunities for independent action, just because she doesn't want to be bothered worrying about him.

Children need the adventure of taking small trips and after the ninth year there would be no real harm in letting a child get on a train or plane, where there would be official protection until he got to his destination.

Children enjoy trips to the grocery, handling money and making change and getting their purchases home safely. They like to hop on a bus and go some place without any adult supervision. They want to pedal their bike beyond the limits of the city, just to show that they know how to get back safely again. It is a shame to deny them these adventures.

Girls like to assume unusual obligations in the home over and above washing dishes and making beds. If they close the kitchen door and have an orgy of candy making or cake baking that is not only a treat to them but a step forward in independent behavior. If they are given a pattern and some inexpensive material and struggle to achieve a garment, that will pave the way for more ambitious sewing projects in the future.

There is no specific moment at which a mother can say, "Now, I am going to let my child be more independent." The moments come all through the child's life and should be recognized and used so that step by step he will learn how to look out for himself, and be ready to stand on his own feet, when adulthood arrives. He can't do this without taking some chances and without constant practice in planning and acting independently.

Plenty of Fat

The success of frying articles dipped in egg and cracker almost always depends upon having plenty of fat in the pan, and that very hot. In hotels and restaurants the fat is so deep that there is no need to turn the article to brown on all sides. After cooking, the remaining fat may be strained into a glass jar and kept for further use, so it really is not as extravagant as it sounds.

Hard Water

It is very difficult to keep the bathtub perpetually ringless in vicinities where hard water is used. In such cases try adding a few drops of kerosene to the soapy water and see how wonderfully it wipes away that rim. A small bottle of kerosene might be kept in the medicine closet for convenience, carefully marked, of course.

As an example of what can happen in the nightclub business, consider what befell Misha Bess, owner of the Continental Balalaika, the other night.

Kittens.

Misha Bess

About 10 o'clock, things being in a temporary lull, the hat check girl "went for the fresh air." No sooner had she stepped out the door, says Misha,, then she found a cat had given birth to five mewling kittens smack in front of the Balalaika's window.

After that, things no longer were in a lull. Misha rushed to the scene to verify the hat check girl's breathless announcement. He saw for himself, and he also noted that the night was chill.

"So I take the cat with the kittens," he relates, "I put them in a box, and brings them to the prima donna's room."

And there, amid the greasepaint, the mirrors, the bright lights, the costumes, Tabby and offspring today are doing nicely.

"Everybody is congratulating me," smiles foster-father Bess, "and everybody wants cigars."

Seems as if anything can happen in the nightclub business.

Six years ago, when he was 30, Singer Jon Hastings came to a conclusion. "I found I could do better as a pianist," he says.

Nowadays you'll find him in the Roger Smith Hotel's Cafe Caprice, playing all manner of requests and slipping in a bit of Debussy here and there because he likes that composer's works best of all.

Francesca, the Cafe Caprice's mentalist, is on the trail of something, too. It's one thing, she reports, to sit down with a person and leisurely tell his fortune and quite another to gather many impressions from nothing more than his handwritten name and address.

The other day she picked up a letter from a total stranger and, from the writing on the envelope, jotted down her impressions. Next day she contacted the stranger, read her findings, and learned she'd made out about 35 per cent correct.

"Now, what would you call that?" she asks. You should be a ballplayer, Francesca.

HITHER AND YON . . . Marjory Hendricks' Normandy Farm, done-over and with a new kitchen wing, opens April 1. The kitchen includes dining rooms for the staff as well as carefully arranged sections for baking, deep-freezing, and salad and dessert making . . . The Salle de Champagne (Cairo Hotel) at 4 p. m. today begins its weekly fashion shows with models parading Dress Designer Philip Robertson's creations before the cocktail crowd . . . Those new, 15-feet-high murals at Fan & Bill's, the Connecticut ave. eatery, have attracted so much attention from patrons that Owner Sam Frost is having a brochure made up to explain them.—Robert P. Jordan.

That Musty Odor

To remove traces of odors in jars and bottles after the contents have been used, tear newspaper into small pieces and insert in the jar. Cover tightly and allow the paper to remain for a couple of days. The paper will absorb all odors.

A Grease Spot

If you notice a fresh grease spot on the kitchen wall paper near the stove apply cornstarch at once, working it in lightly with the fingers. Brush off and repeat, and you will find the cornstarch will absorb the fresh grease.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Sign Reveals Presence Of Secret Airport

Maj. J. Z. Mims of 303 Windsor st., Silver Spring, Md., and Ernest McIver of 3109 Circle Hill rd., Alexandria, Va., catch me napping with the question: "Do you know where Tousi Airport is?"

They explain that a sign in the vicinity of the Pentagon shows the direction to this little-known airport. It plainly states: "TOUSI AIRPORT."

IS JAYWALKING ILLEGAL?

Our recent item about the rights of pedestrians has raised a corollary issue: What local law says that it's illegal to jaywalk?

Preliminary investigation indicates that there isn't any such law.

There is one, according to Inspector Miller's office, which provides that when a vehicle is approaching, no pedestrian may use any roadway in such a manner as to constitute a hazardous situation.

If there is no vehicle approaching, and the jaywalker's meanderings do not constitute a hazard, our traffic department says it would have no right to make an arrest.

However, before you start taking advantage of that law, just remember that statistics show that your chances of getting across the street in one piece are many times better when you cross at an intersection than they are when you jaywalk.

So please be careful. Loyal readers don't grow on trees. (And don't try to make a monkey out of me with wisecracks based on that last remark.)

PERSONAL NOTES

Betty Robb, 3600 Reservoir rd. nw.: "Uncle Jay" Owen isn't on the air right now. He's considering a couple of offers and may be back soon.

MISCELLANY

Got any old pictures which show the construction work on the Senate Subway? If you have, J. E. Weber would certainly like to get a call from you on Dupont 6420. He's written a story about the subway, and because the publisher asked for pictures of the uncompleted project, District Liner Weber has combed the files, the Archives, and even the Library of Congress (where he was told that if he finds a picture, they'd like to borrow it and make a copy) . . . First to leap to the defense of Rhymster Metcalfe for "missing a beat" was Bernice M. Willey of Lanham, Md., who suggests that the culprit may have been our printer, and not Metcalfe—a suggestion which would appear to have some measure of merit . . . After seeing the name of the Board of Trade's Clarence A. Arata in the papers many times, I finally met him the other day—and discovered he was the same "Rats" Arata with whom I went to high school, and a mighty sweet athlete in his day . . . R. G. Brown of 3274 Martha Custis dr., Alexandria, Va., wants to know why it is that a once-a-week comic page ad invariably results in the shifting of Barnaby to an inside page. "Why don't they move some other strip every once in a while, instead of always forcing the Barnaby fans to hunt through the paper?" he asks. The answer is obvious: Only we Barnaby fans are loyal enough to conduct a search for our hero . . . Louise H. Puleo of 1312 Tuckerman st. nw. forwards a full-page magazine ad offering brand-new Pontiacs for $783. Then she takes the joy out of life by informing me that the ad came from a 1940 issue.

SOCIAL OUTCAST

Walter (Pounds) Haight, our spherical racing expert, says he's the only man in town who can't get into a Pyramid Club.

"Nobody is brave enough to let me get above him in the pyramid," wails Walter. "If it didn't make me so hungry, I'd go on a diet."

Incidentally, Walter suggests a pyramid variation designed especially for the District Line.

Every guest brings one grain of corn; when the winner reaches the top of the pyramid, he wins the whole column.

PIED MARQUEE DEPT.

Edward Eudell of 720 Quackenbos st. nw. reports that both facades of the Colony Theater recently bore the legend:

"Angles With Dirty Faces."

OVERHEARD

"I figured I better keep my mouth shut, and stay out of trouble. There's mighty few deaf and dumb people in jail."

Listen to Bill Gold's "This Is Washington," the District Line on the Air, Monday through Friday, over WTOP, from 10 a. m. to Arthur Godfrey time at 10:30.

Johnson Will Surprise Services

By Drew Pearson

The Army and Navy are going to have some real surprises when Louis Johnson takes over as Secretary of National Defense. He really means business when it comes to scaling off the century-old crust of Army-Navy rivalry and making all three services act as if they were serving under the same flag.

Johnson

No definite decision has been made as yet, but one thing in the back of Johnson's mind is to ask Congress to abolish Annapolis and West Point as traditional training schools for the Army and Navy.

Johnson has already been talking the matter over with some of his intimate advisers and here are some of the points they have placed before him:

1. Real rivalry between the Army and Navy comes from the Annapolis-West Pointers at the top. It doesn't come from the younger officers below, and particularly isn't carried on by the reserve officers who haven't been exposed to four years of intensive Annapolis-West Point tradition.

2. Other professional men, such as doctors and lawyers, take four years at any accredited college, then specialized at a professional school.

3. Therefore, its proposed to use Annapolis and West Point as normal training schools for all officers, mixing up the future commanders of the Army, Navy and Air Force. Not until they have rubbed shoulders and got acquainted for two to three years at West Point or Annapolis would they decide their ultimate branch of the service. After this preliminary nonspecialized training they would specialize at a separate school to become either Air Force or Navy or Army officers.

Note—A committee of noted educators under some distinguished scholastic figure, such as President James Conant of Harvard, would study the matter first and recommend the best solution to the Secretary of National Defense.

Civil Rights Again

Highlight of President Truman's private meeting with congressional leaders immediately following his return from Key West was a decision to make another try for enactment of the civil rights program.

Senate Majority Leader Scott Lucas intends to press for a roll-call vote not only on anti-lynching and poll-tax repeal, but on the hotly controversial fair employment practices program, chief target of Dixie filibusterers.

However, the Senate decks will be cleared first of other major bills, including a new labor law, social security extension, public housing and minimum wage legislation—all road-blocked by the recent talkathon.

"Of course, I still think that's the way it should have been handled in the first place," remarked Lucas, who was never enthusiastic about the White House strategy of an early showdown on civil rights.

Lucas observed that Republican Senators who joined with Southern Democrats in the recent filibuster already are beginning to feel the backlash of public opinion from their States.

Mail Bag

Senator Clyde Hoey of North Carolina—Apologies for getting the wrong Mrs. Ernest Howard with whom you were photographed the other day; and glad to know that the lady in the photograph was not the Mrs. Ernest Howard, wife of the RFC official, whom your committee is investigating . . . Also apologies to Mrs. Ernest Howard of 1521 Monroe st., who sat beside Senator Hoey at a dinner given by the citizens association and who is not the wife of an RFC official. Also apologies to Mrs. Ernest Howard of 2744 Woodley pl., who was not at the dinner but who is the wife of the RFC official . . . Walter Winchell, New York—The Hooper Survey is laying off some of its operators. What is this going to do to your rating? . . . Grover Whalen, Delray, Fla.—Gov. Fuller Warren of Florida once joined the Ku Klux Klan, but he was wise enough to recognize his error and get out almost immediately, and big enough to admit recently that he made a mistake . . . E. A. Stephens, New Orleans—It was a definite fact that the Key West pictures made of the President from a Navy blimp were OK'd in advance both by the Navy and one of the President's top secretaries, William Hassett. Later, another presidential secretary, Charlie Ross, reversed Hassett and the Navy . . . Arthur Goldberg, counsel for the CIO, Washington, D. C.—Senator Taft has agreed to more than 20 changes in the Taft-Hartley Act. They have been worked out privately by Republican members of the Senate Labor Committee.
